

Life of the Apostle Peter. This Apostle was born at Bethsaida, a city of Galilee, situated on the banks of the Lake Genesareth, called also the sea of Galilee, and sometimes the Lake of Tiberias. The particular time of this great Apostle's birth cannot be known, the Evangelists and other writers among the primitive Christians, having been silent on the subject. It is pretty certain however, that he was at least ten years older than his Divine Master; the circumstances of his being married and in a settled course of life, when he first became a follower of the Messiah, and that authority and respect which the gravity of his person procured him among the rest of the Apostles, sufficiently declare this conjecture to be just.

Henry S. Geyer, Senator elect from Missouri. In May last, said a friend to us the other day, happening to be detained in St. Louis to await the completion of some business arrangements, and not knowing well how to dispose of any time, I strolled up to the Court House, in hopes of seeing the Montesquians, who were at that time in custody on a charge of murder. I was led there not so much by a desire to hear the arguments of counsel, as by a curiosity to see the men whose case was exciting so much interest in the community. In this I was disappointed, as the parties were not in court. As I was standing in the afternoon, the Sheriff courteously invited me to a seat within the bar, which I accepted. Some one, whose name I did not learn, and which I felt too little interest to inquire, was making a long-winded oration for the prosecution on the whole afternoon. Near me was seated a tall, elderly man, with a plain matter-of-fact looking countenance, and as I should judge about sixty years of age. There was nothing striking in his manner, dress, or personal appearance—nothing, indeed, to indicate that he was anything more than one of those men you would likely to meet every day in a crowd, or pass in the street without bestowing a second thought as to who or what he was. He sat near the table, with his body bent forward, while his spectacles between his knees, and apparently giving no special attention to the proceedings of the court, or to anything else, that was going on around him. In fact, he might have been taken for a casual visitor of the court-room, led there by the same curiosity by which I myself had been drawn.

newspapers, and raised the funds two per cent. In Franconia last summer, a hen having lost all her chickens, adopted a small puppy about four weeks old, and treated him in all respects as she had treated one of her brood. She zealously defended him against the attack of the other denizens of the yard, gave him choice morsels of meat and drink, and in every way comforted herself in motherly style. Her adopted child arranged much and in general conducted well and he must have been an "ungrateful puppy" if he had not. As the time passed and her charge waxed larger, however, some few drawbacks to dame Parlett's happiness arose. For instance, he manifested decided contempt for pieces of bread, worms, and seeds, which she unremotely sought and scratched out for him; then too he would frighten her nearly out of her senses by his preciously loud barking. But her greatest annoyance was in fact that she could never induce her feathered favorite to roost.—Portland News.

GIN MAKING, &C.
We are prepared to execute orders to any extent in the above line, both for new work and repairs. Our Gins are not surpassed by any made in the State, possessing all the advantages of the Falling Breast and Sliding Ribs, which save a great deal in way of repairs. We also use the Steel Plate Saws, with teeth set in an angle that cannot possibly injure the finest staple, with an improvement to regulate the motion of the cotton or broad cloth, to secure the plan, giving at once, the advantages of lightness, strength and force—all very material in the successful operation of a Gin. We would invite planters to call at our shop and examine for themselves, whilst we would assure the public generally, that they shall have no cause to complain either of our work or prices.
