

The Honey Bee.

One of the most interesting and curious little creatures in the insect world is the Honey Bee. For many hundred years the habits of these wonderful insects have been carefully studied.

Every association of bees has three kinds—the queen, the drones, and the workers. It is estimated that a hive usually contains from six to twelve thousand bees.

The drones are the largest bees in the family. Their bodies are thick, short, and clumsy, and they are about the size of two working bees.

The queen bee is the mother of the family, and governs the hive. She is longer and more slender than the drone, but not as large, and is larger in every respect than the worker.

The queen is very seldom seen—Sometimes she may be observed during the time of swarming. She may occasionally be found in her royal cell, when the bees have been destroyed with smoke for the purpose of obtaining their honey.

The queen usually commences as soon as the genial warmth of spring comes on. About the first of May her "great laying" takes place, when she deposits from one to two hundred eggs per day.

When the young queen has attained her growth and begins to say "peep peep," the old one, knowing it to be the cry of a rival for liberty, is aroused, and attempts to get at the royal cell to destroy her.

of the bee is, that if deprived of a queen, when there are no young queens or eggs in the royal cells, they take the larva of a worker, place it in a royal cell, or build one of these cells around it, where, by being fed on royal jelly it becomes a queen.

THE SUMMER BANNER.

Sunterville, So. Ca. J. S. G. HAYWARDSON, EDITOR. W. P. B. RICHARDSON, EDITOR.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 21, 1851. Messrs. A. WHITE & Co., are Agents for the Banner in Sunterville.

The Market. SATURDAY, May 17.—The sales of Cotton in Charleston to-day amounted to 637 bales, at prices ranging from 3 1/4 to 9 5/8.

The Macao (Ga.) Telegraph styles as "Admirable" the Address and Resolutions of the late Charleston Convention, which body, it says, "has done its work faithfully and firmly, and given its decisions the force of a unanimity worthy the proud and gallant people whose opinions it reflected."

Central Committee. We learn that the President of the Central Southern Rights Association has appointed the following gentlemen to constitute the Central Committee for the Southern Rights Association of South Carolina: Col. MARY GREGG, Gen. D. P. JARVIS, Gen. JOHN BUCHANAN, Col. J. H. CARMY, Col. A. E. GARDNER, Gen. JAMES JOHNS, EDWARD BELLINGER, JR., Hon. JOS. A. BRADY, MAJ. Wm. LAYAL.

ALABAMA.—The Convention of Delegates from the several Congressional Districts to nominate a candidate for Congress and which was composed equally of Whigs and Democrats has unanimously nominated the Hon. Wm. L. YANBY. The ground of this union was the boldness of Mr. Yanby's position on the great Southern question.

FREE SOIL ADVENTURE.—The President has appointed GEORGE BAXTER, of Missouri, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States for the territory of New Mexico. This position, in the canvass of 1848 and 1850, contained on the stump that the local laws of our Mexican territory against slavery, would prevail despite the Constitution. So, as Chief Justice, will he decide.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.—We have been able to give you yet but a passing glance at the May No. of this Journal. The subject treated upon appears to be of interest and importance to the Planter. We have often recommended to our agricultural friends the enlarging of their knowledge, theoretical as well as practical, on the various subjects connected with their avocation.

the Virginia Convention of 1829-30" by HUGH R. PARSONS, Esq. These sketches of the great men who were congregated there are full of life-like description, interesting narrative and anecdote and mastery and discriminating criticism and analysis.

Gov. of the "Lady's Book," is as he humorously says, none of age. The June number of this magazine, which we have already received, completes its 42nd volume and is the finishing stroke of Mr. Godey's labors during his 21 years of service. How much are not literature, taste and refinement indebted to his well directed efforts during this period.

Arrival of the Cambria. Liverpool dates to the 21st inst., have been received by the Cambria which steamer reached Halifax on Tuesday, at 9 P. M.—The steamer Africa had arrived. The Cotton market had, since the sailing of the Arctic, fluctuated considerably, but had settled into a decline of 1 1/4 to 3 1/8.

GREENVILLE AND COLUMBIA RAILROAD.—Hon. John Belton O'Neal, President of the Greenville and Columbia Railroad, gives the following gratifying statement of its business from the first of January to the first of May: "In the middle of March, it did not reach Newberry."

EUROPEAN COMMERCIAL CONVENTION.—We are gratified to learn (says the Messenger) that the eminent Commercial lawyer of John Jay, Esq. of this city is about to visit the United States in the month of June. It will be under the firm of FRENCH, TROUBADOUR & CO., and will be conducted by Mr. R. L. TROUBADOUR. Such a house cannot fail at once to command an extensive commission business not only from Charleston, but from the parts of the Southern country that are intimately connected with the mercantile and mercantile world.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.—The basis question is still under discussion in the Virginia Convention. On Friday a proposition by Mr. Stoddard of asserting the principle of the non-resistance, was reported—58 to 62. Mr. Stoddard's proposition was then rejected by a large majority.

THE SOUTHERN LITERARY MESSENGER.—The May number contains a variety of excellent articles. Among them is an able examination of, and strictures upon, the Radical Philosophy, of which Mr. GREELEY is one of the exponents in this country, and which, from its adaptation to the peculiar constitution of Northern Society, its harmony with the biblical political principles which have long obtained there, has already made great progress and threatens to inflame and disorganize our whole country.

Shall we Secede? "Shall we secede?" Why should we not secede? If the Union has failed to answer the purpose for which it was created—if it has been so perverted as to operate as a curse instead of a blessing upon the Southern section—if it only serves to aggrandize the North at the expense of the South—and if there is nothing upon which to base a hope that the former contemplates any change in her policy of aggression, which all acknowledge she has been pursuing, we ask why—why the South should not secede?

It is a table to reveal the assaults of her enemies! Then she is already enslaved. Is she afraid to make the attempt? Then the legitimate inference to be drawn is still less creditable to her boasted chivalry. Or, is it, that although we confess we have been wronged, yet that we do not consider the wrongs we have hitherto suffered, sufficiently aggravated to justify secession? Then, therefore, we would rather "bear those ills we have, than fly to others that we know not of!"

But such notions and such reasoning will not bear examination, and if we suffer ourselves to be influenced by them, the fate of the Southern States may be ours, and we and our enemies both fall by the sword at last. We have been wronged, say our submission friends, but still not to that degree that we warrant us in breaking up this "glorious Union"—the last refuge for the down-trodden! &c. Let us investigate this a little.

In the first place, to submit to one wrong, is holding out a direct encouragement, and offering a powerful inducement, to our enemies to inflict a second and a more aggravated one. How clearly the truth is demonstrated in the history of this country! If the South had not so foolishly listened to the fatal counsels of the "Compromisers" in 1820, but had manfully stood up for her rights to the millionth part of an inch, all her rights to the millionth part of an inch, would have been secured, and her dignities could be successfully impeached upon her with impunity, would ever have a second time entered upon? But it is not the first, nor the second, nor the tenth, nor the twentieth instance of wrong perpetrated upon her by the North, of which the South is now complaining. The most palpable and barefaced acts of aggression have been committed upon her during the long series of twenty or thirty years past.

It is in the second place, if the South submits much longer to such confessedly unjust legislation as has marked the history of the Federal Government during the last quarter of a century, she will become so weak and the North so strong, as to put it out of her power to resist the shackles of her abolition opponents, and she will be reduced to a state of complete subjugation to the Union. In the third place, if breaking up the Union will be a great calamity to the world, now standing the injustice of its legislation towards the Southern section, whose fault would it be? Certainly the guilt would rest upon the shoulders of the South. If she herself compelled to go out of the Union, it would be for the sole purpose of seeking that justice which she has been denied.

It is in the fourth place, if the South turns upon the question of how much less South can possibly bear, how many acts of oppression she can possibly manage to put up with, before absolute starvation and the claims of a tyrant, actually confront her in the face—but, is it the intention of her assailants to wring her at all, and how long were really been committed? Weak as were the American colonies when the Revolution broke out, and powerful as was England, they did not hesitate a moment to vindicate and maintain their constitutional rights by the sword. They never "submitted" from the first. Why should the Southern States submit now, who are more oppressed than were the mother Colonies of 1776?

Call of a National Convention. The Cleveland (Ohio) papers contain a call for a National Convention, without distinction of party, to be held in Cleveland on the 1st of July next, for the purpose of taking political action against the Fugitive Slave Law. A National Convention would be a blessing to the people of the United States at this crisis. It would result in a more permanent basis for the establishment of civil liberty and the rights of the States, or a severance of the unnatural tie which now binds the States of this Republic together. It is through this means alone, that the South can expect to see her wrongs redressed, and her rights secured, and her independence maintained. It is through this means alone, that the South can expect to see her wrongs redressed, and her rights secured, and her independence maintained.

State Sovereignty.—The right of Secession. Nothing can be more manifest from the journals of the Convention that framed the federal Constitution, than the States which were parties to it, never designed to yield the right of secession, nor to confer upon the federal government, the right to coerce a State that should withdraw from the confederacy. The same truths are taught, by the manner in which several of the States ratified the constitution.

Below are the acts of ratification by the States of New York, Virginia and Rhode Island. "New York.—We, the Delegates of the people of the State of New York, duly elected, and met in Convention, having maturely considered the Constitution of the United States of America, agreed to on the 17th day of September, in the year 1787, by the (General) Convention, then assembled at Philadelphia, a copy whereof precedes these presents) do declare and make known:—That all power is originally vested in, and consequently derived from the people; and that Government is instituted for their common interest, protection, and security.

"That the enjoyment of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, are essential rights, which every Government ought to respect, and preserve. "That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it may become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, to whom they (the people) may have granted the same. And that these clauses in said Constitution, which declare that Congress shall not exercise certain powers, do not imply that Congress is entitled to any powers not given by the said Constitution; but such clauses are to be construed either as exceptions to certain specified powers, or as reserved merely for greater caution." &c. "Done in Convention, in the State of New York, on the 26th day of July, 1788. By order of the Convention, GEO. CLINTON, President. JOHN M'KISSON, A. B. Banker, Secretaries."

"VIRGINIA.—We, the Delegates of the people of Virginia duly elected in pursuance of a recommendation from the General Assembly, and met in Convention, having fully and freely investigated and discussed the proceedings of the Federal Convention, and being prepared as well as the most mature deliberation hath enabled us to decide thereon.—Do, in the name and behalf of the people of Virginia, declare and make known, that the powers granted under the Constitution, being derived from the people of the United States, may be resumed by them whenever the same shall be found to have been abused, or whenever that every power not granted thereby, remains with them, and at their will; that, therefore, no right of any denomination can be cancelled, abridged, restrained or modified by the Congress, by the Senate, or House of Representatives, acting in any capacity; nor by the President or any Department of office of the United States, except in those instances in which powers are given by the Constitution, for those purposes, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or to their respective State Governments, &c. &c. &c. do declare and make known:—That the powers of Government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever it shall become necessary to their enjoyment, that every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by the said Constitution clearly delegated to the Congress of the United States, or to the departments of the Government thereof, remains to the people of the several States, or