The Son Kish

This story has been told elsewhere, but the people of Delaware, Ohio, insist that it started in their college town. An old farmer, tall and with gray hair, was walking toward the country at the edge of town when he was met by three students.

"How do you do, Father Abraham," said the first.

"How do you do, Father Isaac," said the second.

"How do you do, Father Jacob," said the third, and all three bowed deeply.

The patriarch deliberately stopped and eyed them.

"I am neither Abraham, Isaac, nor Jacob," he replied, "but Saul, the son of Kish, who went out to seek his father's asses; and behold, they are found."

The head of the family, with his beloved briar-root pipe and his favorite magazine, had settled back in the rocker for a quiet, comfortable evening.

On the other side of an intervening table was the miniature counterpart of himself, the wrinkling of whose eight year-old forehead indicated that he was mentally wrestling with some perplexing problem. After a while he looked toward his comfort-loving parent, and, with a hopeless infection asked: "Pa."

"Yes, my son."

"Can the Lord make everything?"

"Yes, my boy."

"Everything?"

"There is nothing, my son, that he cannot do."

"Papa, could he make a clock that would strike less than one?"

"Now, Johnny, you go right upstairs to your ma, and don't stop down here to annoy me when I'm reading."

Johnny went and wondered still.

"My husband," remarked a Philadelphia matron to a son of her friend, "was a confirmed smoker with a tobacco heart when I married him a year ago, but today he never touches the weed."

"Fine," complimented one of the group. "To break off a life time habit requires a strong will."

"And that's just what I have got," declared the wife.

"I can't find any old clothes to put on the scarecrow," complained the farmer. "Why don't you use some of the fancy duds that Son brought home from college?" suggested his wife.

"I'm trying to scare the crows; I'm not trying to make 'em laugh."

An Irishman was walking through a pasture when a bull tossed him over the fence. Picking himself up quickly the son of Erin faced the animal and said with suppressed wrath:

"If it wasn't fer yez bowin' an' scrapin' an' yer apologizin' I'd o' thought yez did that on purpose."

"Bobby, do you know you've deliberately broken the eighth commandment by stealing Jame's candy?"

"Well, I thought I might as well break the eighth commandment and have the candy as to break the tenth and only 'covet' it."

"Dorothy," asked her aunt one day, "do you like to go to school?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied dutiful Dorothy. "I like going and I like coming back. It is staying at the place between times that always sticks me."

is on his throne again. Money is circulating freely.

The time to get money and the time to save is when money is in circulation. No use to get it unless you save it. No better way to save than to deposit regularly in the bank.

The experience of last fall proved the advantage of a bank account. Compare the condition of those who had a bank account and were able to hold their cotton with your own condition.

Begin now. Bring your deposits to the Bank of Pageland as hundreds of others have done already.
