AT PEACE.

And I said, "She is dead; I could not brook Again on that marvelous face to look." But they took my hand and led me in, And left me alone with my nearest kin-Once again in that silent place, My beautiful dead and I, face to face.

And I could not speak, and I could not stir. But I stood and with love looked on her.

With love, and with rapture, and strange surprise I looked on the lips and the cold-shut eyes. On the perfect rest and calm content,

And the bappiness there in her features blent; And the thin white hands that had wrought so much, Now nerveless to kiss or to favered touch My beautiful dead who had known the strife, The pain and the sorrow that ve call Life. Who had never faltered beneath her cross, Nor murraured when loss followed swift on loss; And the smile that sweetened her lips alway

Lay light on her blessed mouth that day I smoothed from her hair a silver thread. And I wept, but I could not think her dead I felt with a wonder too deep for speech She could tell what only the angels teach. And over her mouth I leaned my ear, Less there might be something I should not hear. Then out from the silence between us

A message that reached to my inmos

"Why weep you to-day, who have wept before, That the road was rough I must journey

Why mourn that my lips can answer not When anguish and sorrow are both forgot? Behold, all my life I have longed for rest, Yea, e'en when I held you on my breast; And, now that I lie in a breathless sleep, Instead of rejoicing, you sigh and weep. My dearest, I know that you would not break

If you could, my slumber, and have me

For, though life was full of things that bless, I have never till now known happiness.

Then I dried my tears, and with lifted I left my mother, the beautiful dead.

The Diamond Fields near Kimberly.

The scene at the bottom of the mine is remarkable. Scattered over the irregular surface are, perhaps, 2,000 Kaffirs, made men, stark naked, and black as ebony. These men drill the blasting holes under the orders of the white miners, work out the loosened ground with pick and shovel, load and tip the trucks, take up and relay the tramways as the levels alter, and do all the hard work under white overseers, who are directed by the claim manager. To a stranger the scene is weird and uncanny. The noise of the pumping engines, the resounding blows of the heavy hammers on the steel drills, the jarring noise of the iron trucks and their tipping, and the wild appearance and unearthly shouts of the perspiring Kaffirs, all combine to make one cast a longing glance upward, and hail with inward joy the sound of the bell above, which proclaim that the day's work is done.

The ascending trucks now carry up the white overseers and officials, while the Kaffirs swarm like black ants up precipitous paths and hanging ladders, and in a few minutes the mine is silent, and apparently deserted. Then the bell again, giving the signal to fire the blasts, and solitary figures, white and black, are seen rushing about with tiny sparks, and them making for the appointed shelter places. A few minutes more and the cannonade begins. The explosions shake the solid ground on which you stand. The blue flies into the air or falls in masses. Huge slices of dangerous "reef," or wall, come down with thundering noise. Then once more all is still. The smoke clears away, the dust settles, and again the ball rings, and the "night shift" of miners and Kaffirs go swarming down to their work. The blasting takes place at 6 and 12 o'clock, and the roar from the four mines at midnight can be heard for around.-Cor. London Standard.

A Stranger Who Took the Cake

The young people of a certain church are constantly devising novel plans for their church socials. A short time ago they decided to have a sewing contest for young men, and the competitor whose workmanship was decided to be the best was to receive a very nice cake of liberal dimensions, which the young ladies had When the contest took place, among the dozen competitors was a stranger. When the work was examined the young ladies were greatly chagrined to learn that the unknown gentleman's sewing was far superior to that of any of the others. Of course they were com-pelled, but much against their will, to award him the cake. The next day the young ladies discovered that the winner of the cake was a tailor, and they were maddest people who were ever connected with a churce. The simple mention of the word "tailor" now sends them into hysterics.-St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Subterranean Hotel at Niagara.

"Why can not we," said a long-headed citizen, "have a subterranean hotel at Niagara, underneath the American falls, with a piazza looking out upon the vast sheet of falling water? All that is necessary is to sink a shaft on Goat Island, tunnel straight out under the channel, blast out a cavern, put in iron pillars, if necessary, to support the ceiling, and construct any sort of an observation platform you please, facing the fall from the rear. What more delicious place can you imagine in which to pass a sultry afternoon! A por-tion of the veranda might be shut off from the spray by means of plate glass doors, so no change of clothing would be neces-sary for those who dislike dampness.— Buffalo Courier.

War Preferable to an Election. Mrs. Henry Fawcett, in order to illustrate what she describes as "the deplorable degree to which women let private selfishness pervert their ideas of public affairs," mentions that about the year 1878, when England seemed to be on the brink of war with Russia, she heard the wife of a Liberal member of parliament say, "I would rather there were a war than a gen-eral election, because the excitement of election always makes my husband ill.-Exchange.

Says the Columbia Rigister of Tuesday: A telegrapm received by Captain W. D. Starling yesterday from his manner reports the loss of all his cattle, about one hundred head, many of them thoroughbred and grade Jerseys, one fine mare and two colts. . THE MAY FLOWER.

The Assembly Recommends the Removal What a Clever New England Editor Has to Say About Her. The following paragraph is clipped from The Orangeburg, South Carolina,

There is good reason to believe that the Mayflower, after dumping Puritanism In the Columbia Theological Seminary, holds views repugnant to the Word of mainder of its existence to the slave trade. If it didn't, let some New Englander give us the true history of the vessel. Was the Puritan Maydower a slave ship or not? Will Brother Riggs, of the Bristol, Conn., Press answer the question?

Now, Brother Sims, in the first place the Mayflower didn't belong to the Puritans, but was charted by them to bring them across the big ditch and set them down on New England soil, and they were in no way responsible for the use to which the little boat was put afterwards. It was employed to carry them supplies and raiment twice, and then the Puritan element dropped out of it entirely.

In the second place, Brother Sims, the Mayflower was English property, and if ever employed in transporting "niggers" from Africa to American soil it was so employed by its English proprietors.

In the third place, Brother Sims, the Mayflower was a slow old tub, requiring 65 days for its first voyage from England to Cape Cod. You can judge from that how well adapted it was to run over from the African coast with a holdfull of perspiring darkies.

In the fourth place, Brother Sims, the Mayflower was so weak and un-seaworthy when it brought over its first Puritan cargo, that those on board when half seas over, seriously debated whether to proceed or return. But they sagely concluded that as it was just as far one way as the other they would waste no time in turning around.

In the fifth place, Brother Sims, if by "slave trade" is meant that with the colonies on American soil, it is almost a certainty that few blacks were landed on our shores during the probable lifetime of the Mayflower, as the very first were imported only the year be-fore the first band of Pilgrims landed at Plymouth.

In the sixth place, Brother Sims, it isn't of any more consequence whether the Mayflower was engaged in the slave trade than it is whether Noah's ark was so employed. And indeed it is a well authenticated fact that Noah's ark did bring Ham over the high seas, and he is accredited with being the smoked original of the whole negro

"FOR FORTY YEARS I have been a victim to CATARRH—three-fourths of the time a sufferer from EXCRUCIATING PAINS ACROSS MY FOREHEAD and MY NOSTRILS. The discharges were so offensive that I hesitate to mention it, except for the good it may do some other sufferer. A Healthy Growth. THE SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF

I the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association is marvellous in the annals of life insurance enterprise. Its name has be-come a tower of strength, and has been well earned by the untiring devotion of President Harper and his associates. Its astonishing prosperity has provoked attacks which are best repelled by a frank and full exhibit of its greatly increasing line of business. Up to July 1, 1885, this shows a gain of no less than $13 214,580 over that of the corresponding period last year. In June alone its mortuary receipts exceeded $250,000, of which over $60,000 went ceeded $250,000, of which over $60,000 went into the Reserve Fund—that triple buttressupon which the association justly prides itself. This reserve now amounts to $425,000, and is employed for three purposes only—to pay death claims, if any should occur in excess of the American Epperience Mortality Tables; to make good any possible deficiency in the Death Fund Account, and to be apportioned among those who have been members of the Association fifteen years, etc. As the first and second contingencies named are not likely to arise, the third object is the one upon which the fund is practically expended. It is full of other good points, among which may be mentioned the economical salary list—less than $50,000 for carrying on the whole work than $50,000 for carrying on the whole work of the vast institution—and payments to widews and orphans at the rate of over $2,000 cash cash day.—From the old and conservative New York Daily Journal of
