

THE GALATEA'S MONKEY DEAD.

The Wonderfully Intelligent Pet of Lieut. and Mrs. Henn.

The pennant of the British cutter Galatea, in winter quarters at South Brooklyn, drooped mournfully at half mast the other day. Peggy, the yet of the master, mistress, skipper and crew of the white hulled racer, was dead. Peggy was a female who species has been immortalized by Darwin. Capt. Daniel Bradford, of the Galatea, said he believed Peggy exemplified the truth of a theory opposed to Darwin's—that the monkey descended from man. He thinks Peggy descended a few pegs and then holed to.

"All that the creature wanted to make her human," said the black bearded British sailor, "was the English language. She could learn almost anything but that. She had a language of her own that we couldn't understand, which shows how dull we are, but she understood our language, although she couldn't talk it."

Peggy died at noon in the cabin of the cutter. She was ill about six hours. Capt. Bradford wrapped the body up in the Union Jack, and made preparations for a burial. He got four skippers of yachts lying in the basin to act as pall bearers. They carried the body to the head of the pier, where a grave had been made. Peggy was lowered into the grave, and the captain put over it a little slab of pure white marble.

Peggy was born in Malta about three and a half years ago. She was purchased from one of the natives of Malta by the mate of the schooner yacht Shamrock, and thus had Irish blood in her veins. The mate of the Shamrock took her to Southampton, where Capt. Bradford, at Mrs. Henn's request, bought her and took her to the Galatea. Peggy could pull on a halyard like a trained sailor, and she always helped the crew to make and lower sail. She manifested a great interest in the cutter's races. When the Galatea slipped ahead of her rivals Peggy would run out on the bowsprit and jump up and down, and chatter as if she had gone mad. Capt. Bradford said there would be mourning in England when the Galatea's crew over there heard that Peggy was dead.—New York Sun.

A Disappointed Young Miss.

While Thomas C. Acton was sub-treasurer he had for a visitor a young Connecticut miss, and he instructed Cashier Floyd to show her and her mamma through the vaults and let them see how compactly Uncle Sam stored $140,000,000. Mr. Floyd is one of those jolly old gentlemen who believes in pleasing the young folks. He took from one of the vaults a package containing $6,000,000 in $10.00 bank notes, and handing it to the young miss, said: "I guess we can spare that for you." She looked pleased, folded the package of new bills in the middle, opened her hand satchel, and was about to drop the big fortune into it when Mr. Floyd, noticing that she was in earnest, told her that he had just recollected that the government was a little short that day, and that he would have to postpone the gift to some other time. The young miss lives in Forestville, Conn., and only on Thanksgiving day she thought her papa might let her come to New York and get the present awaiting her at the sub-treasury.—New York Sun.

Hogs in a Drug Store.

A drove of 100 hogs that were being driven through Allegheny became frightened and stampeded. About a dozen ran into a drug store bleeding and covered with mud. Two ladies who were waiting for prescriptions screamed with fear. One of them sprang on the counter and the other clambered upon the soda fountain. After upsetting every article of furniture in the store, the fattest of the frightened hogs tried to get behind the prescription counter and overturned the stove. The stove is heated by natural gas, and when it was upset the pipe was broken and a sheet of flame shot up almost to the ceiling. A disastrous conflagration would have been the result but for the prompt action of the proprietor, who turned off the gas. Two of the hogs were badly burned. The owners of the swine were compelled to carry them out.—New York Sun.

Dug His Own Grave.

A very cleverly arranged contrivance has been discovered in the woods near St. George, N. B., by means of which an old and eccentric resident named Tucker intended ending his existence. It had been noticed for several weeks that the old man spent the greater part of his time in the woods, and a party followed him. He soon stopped beside an open grave, which was found to have been constructed for some special purpose. Investigation showed that a box had been placed in it and springs arranged so that a man could lie down in the box and pull down a board, when the grave would fill with earth, and brushwood arranged for the purpose would cover the mound. The discovery was only made just in time to save the man's life, for every detail had been completed.—Chicago Herald.

Eastern Shore Girls as Gunners.

Quite a novel and striking sight was witnessed by a rider on the Blackwater road on Thursday last in the form of a gunning party composed of both ladies and gentlemen. The ladies looked perfectly at home with their guns on their shoulders, and seemed to handle them with as much skill as did the gallant young men at their sides. Each face beamed with delight as they held aloft the string of partridges so lately brought low. The gentlemen were laden with bunches of brilliant autumn leaves and bright red berries gathered from the woods near by, and as they gayly tramped along, followed by the beautiful bird dogs, Beppo and Leo, belonging to Dr. Carroll, it looked quite picturesque and contrived the gypsies who have so lately been among us.—Cambridge News.

Level-Headed and Able.

Helen Potter is a smart woman. She went on the stage a few years ago as a trick elocutionist, and made money. Then she organized a troupe, calling it "Helen Potter's Pleiades." She did not do well with that; but she had saved up some money, and invested it in a Montana cattle ranch. The other day the good Kiner, of the Genesee News, discovered her riding in a caboose among the railroad boys, with half a dozen cars of stock she was taking to Chicago. The cattlemen treated her with the utmost deference, and she rode like a queen. Helen is a great woman, a little cracked on the subject of the rights of her sex, but level-headed and able.

A Surprise to the Surgeons.

Five years ago T. P. Woodall, of Hartsville, Ala., in a fit fell into an open fire, and his skull was so badly burned that he was likely to die. As a last resort surgeons removed the entire skull on a line parallel with the eyebrows, placed an artificial covering over the brain, and Woodall lived until a few days ago, and retained all his faculties.—New York Sun.

An Abandoned Metropolis.

Medora, D. T., the metropolis made famous by the Marquis de Mores and Theodore Roosevelt, is about to be abandoned for the winter. The only drug store in town has just closed, and the hotel was shut up some time ago.

STATE FAIR.

1886 Nov. 9th. Nov. 9th 1886

No doubt the Fair this season will be more successful than any in the past. Extensive preparations are being made on a grand scale to entertain the visitors who expect to attend the fair.

In addition to the above attractions, I will take pleasure in entertaining visitors at the Emporium of Fashions with an exhibition of Men's and Boys' Fashionable Clothing. The display of Men's and Youth's garments are so arranged that the visitor can go to any department and find what he wants.

On entering the store to the right you will find the Gents' Furnishing Goods Department, consisting of Fine Shirts, Laundered and Unlaundered, also Underwear of every description. Half hose in plain and fancy, Collars and Cuffs, Gloves, Handkerchiefs, Suspenders, and a handsome line of Neckwear.

To your left the attractive Hat Department, with its novelties in Hats of all shapes and styles, among them is the celebrated Dunlap Silk and Stiff Hats, of which I am the sole agent in Columbia. In addition to this stock a handsome line of Silk Umbrellas, with gold and silver handles.

Then to the centre of this large store where the stock of Clothing is located and divided into three sections. First section consists of a large variety of sack suits of every style, pattern and quality.

Second section are the one and four button Cutaways in whip-cord, cork-screw, cassimeres and fancy chevatis, in all sizes, qualities and prices.

Third section brings you to the Prince Albert Coat and Vests in all the qualities of Worsted and Granates. In addition you will find a line of Overcoats in all the fashionable styles. This a large and beautiful line of our's; garments in all qualities and styles.

Then the Boys' Department, which is filled with choice suits of boys and children, every style, size, quality and price.

Opposite to the Boys' Department is the Shoe Department, filled with Gents' fine Shoes of every style and quality. This has become a very attractive feature to the Emporium.

Special Notice. To those who expect to attend the South Carolina Club Ball will find a handsome lot of Dyke Coats and Vests at the Emporium. Also full dress Shirts manufactured for special occasions. Black Silk Half Hose, in fact every thing that pertains to make a complete full dress outfit.
