Lamro, S. D., has been put on wheels and moved to Winner, where, as the result of a bitter county seut war and agreement between the two towns, it has consolidated with Winn no margin for profit on many of the ner and as a town ceased wholly to exist.

Large store buildings with their valuable contents were moved intact. Banks, with their cash in the vaults, The perils of bringing a hige lion were put on wheels and made the trip across the prairie while the clerks continued to work and money was received and paid out of customers.

Without disturbing the officials the county court house was hitched to two of the largest traction engines ever built, and it was dragged from Larmo to Winner, where it was placed on a foundation pevicusly prepared for it. The Larmo hotel, drawn without so much as ceasing business a single meal.

The court bouss, a big two story frame building, was the first to be ween moved, since it was necessary that the big house be put in place before smaller houses blocked the way. The big traction engines were hitched to it, and across the prairie it went, the big engines busing and enorting like Mogul locomotives. The distance was three miles, and this was covered in just two hours. So evenly was the 'job" carried on that clerks, writing a their desks were undisturbed. After the court house and jail were moved residences went over in regular flocks. When nightfull overtook a house which was being moved the structure was left by the roadside for the night and the family occupied it is usual.

Then the movers began on the business houses, and store after store was taken to Winner without being interfered with. Banks were removed without the money being locked up, and deposits were receiv-
