Showing What Small Savings Will Do In The Aggregate

The largest railway company in this country recently borrowed fifty million dollars, on its bonds from the people of France. This is remarkable, owing to similar loans made by same people to other countries, about the same time. Where do the French people get all of this money? Jno. D. Rockefeller, after returning from one of his trips to Paris, tells the secret in seven words: "The people of France save their money." YOU cannot afford to take any unnecessary risk with your hard-earned savings. During these prosperous times the temptation to invest in some form of speculation is very great. All sorts of inducements are offered, and, unless great caution is exercised, errors are likely to be made which will prove costly. The shrewd investor does not put his money into every scheme presented which promises large returns, or into some speculation guaranteed to return you something for nothing; rather he is satisfied with ABSOLUTE SECURITY for both PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST such as is afforded by this Bank.

Would it not be well for you to begin saving NOW, according to the policy of the French people? Your account, large or small will be welcomed. Make a START RIGHT AWAY by coming in and talking over your interests with our Cashier.

THE S. S. TEACHER.

(Read by Miss Mattie Miller at the Sunday School convention of No. 9 township at Zion church on Friday, December 2.)

The aim of the Sunday school is to glorify God and save souls.

Do we as Sunday school teachers realize our great responsibility—realize that we are training souls for time and eternity? Some one has said "we teach more by what we are than by what we know." This is true. Did not the actions of the Apostles preach even louder than their words in furnishing the demonstration that the faith they proclaimed was that of the Holy Spirit, and that the church depended not on the arm of flesh, but on the power of God that was in the word which they proclaimed?

The Sunday school teacher should never be off duty for Christ an instant; he should be what he teaches, live the truth, honoring Christ in walk and conversation always bearing in mind that his real self will count for far more with his class than his words will. He should be not only a professing Christian, but a living example of the kind of life he wants every child to live. It is unfortunate to place the destiny of a human soul in the care and under the directing thought of a teacher, who neither believes or lives a consistent Christian life.

It is the Sunday school teacher. His earnestness and enthusiasm are in themselves sermons that the dullest pupil can appreciate. It has well been said, "In the domain of education and religious training more failures arise from lack of enthusiasm than from lack of knowledge or cleverness." Of course it is not easy to be a teacher. It is work, and work is ever tiresome at times, but it is work for Christ, and we want to work for Him. He asks us to do it. If the teacher be alert and aggressive, interested in his theme and in his pupils, his own spirit will be contagious. If the pupils are inattentive it is because they are not interested and if they are uninterested it is because the teacher does not arouse their interest. Where there is attention on the part of the pupils, there will be retention of what they hear discussed in the class.

To be a successful teacher, one must have the love of those under his instruction, and to gain their love he must love them, love them for their virtues, love them in spite of their faults, and love them every day. In love remembering each individual of his class in daily prayer, asking God for strength and knowledge for himself as their teacher.

The pupils are not won by great knowledge, or by the gift of expression, but by sympathy with and appreciation of each one. The teacher must know his pupils, look at things from their point of view, and from their stage of mental and religious development, feel as they feel, put himself in their places, imagine their surroundings to be his own, then he can truly sympathize with them. The teacher should diligently search the scriptures daily, devoutly, reverently, read, think and pray much, and always in the spirit. In his preparation and presentation of the lesson, having this end in view, The bringing of souls to Christ, and the building up of souls in Christ. The teacher should master the lesson in all its principles, analyze it, get the facts as to persons, as to assertions made, and as to circumstances, make an outline of the lesson and build it up to meet the pupils' need. Plan the lesson, so as to take full advantage of the limited time given him, carefully follow his plan without having to stop and think what comes next, and always use the simplest language that every word may be understood.

Teach each lesson that at least one truth shall reach the heart of every pupil rather than every truth shall reach the hearts of a few.
