LANGUAGE OF THE DOG

Senator McLaurin Says it is Worth Studying.

Anderson Farmers' Tribune.

We attended the warehouse conference in Columbia Tuesday and Senator McLaurin showed us this letter and it is so full of the sweet philosophy of life and yet so redolent with a keen satire worthy of Horace, that we begged him for a copy. We are studying "dog language" hard, it goes well with the water wagon.

Master Waldo Banks,
St. Matthews, S. C.

My Dear Waldo:

Your letter to hand. Yes; I will give you a dog—dogology beats all of the other "ologies." Latin and Greek are pretty good languages, needed to make a scholar, but you must learn dog language if you want to make a man. I never trusted a boy who hated dogs, and was always afraid of a girl who hated cats. Experience showed me I was right—the boy has made a rascal if he had a chance, and the girl an old maid because she had no chance. I have forgotten my Latin, but I can talk dog language better than I ever could in my life. That is why it is such a great study. The older and wiser you get the more you need it.

*Mike and I wrote the warehouse bill.

You know, a dog's master is his god, whom he loves with his whole being. Dog language teaches you to love your master, God, never to question, only to love Dog language teaches obedience and self-control, and, greatest of all, courage and loyalty. Nothing is finer than a high-bred bull terrier's courage. It is intelligent courage, not blind like a bull dog's. A bull terrier uses his brains as well as his muscles.

My dog, Mike, has a soul. He is far more of a gentleman than most men I know, and much fitter associate for angels than cowards, liars, hypocrites and drunkards. Even the South Carolina legislature could learn something from Mike's intelligence and energy. He is always on the job, never adjourning over until Monday night. He makes me ashamed of myself. He very often gives me severe lectures about fretting over trifles or taking the Lord's name in vain. If he keeps on, he may make me a real Christian. At the same time he is not a Bill Bryan grape juice sort of a dog. He believes in "preparedness," and when he catches a strange dog around my pasture he always practices "benevolent assimilation."

I can truthfully say, however, that Mike is a high-toned Christian gentleman, because he lives up to his ideals. He nearly ate a dog up while I was at home Christmas, and when I shamed him for fighting on that day he cut me very short by saying that Christ was not born on Christmas day merely to provide comfort and security for cowards. I do not think Mr. Ford or my cousin Andrew Bethea would like Mike, and I am sure Mike would not care a cuss for them.

Mike weighs seventy-five pounds, and is as hard as iron. He is brave but very gentle, as all really brave things are. I saw him throw a 1,500-pound Holstein bull, and yet he will run from a ewe with lambs. Even a sheep tries to fight for its young. Do you know why Mike fought the bull and ran from the sheep? The bull could fight for himself and the sheep was helpless. That is another thing dog language teaches you.

Now, the puppy I spoke to you about is six months old. He is not a son of Mike, but from Columbia, and you know that city life is hard on the morals. He is dead-game, but Mike says he is something of a blackguard and a bully. Suppose you wait; I have reason to believe that in about six weeks the stork will visit Mike and Mrs. Nellie Mike with some beautiful white puppies, and Marlboro puppies will be better than Columbia puppies. The air here is not as pure as in Marlboro, and the water has whiskey in it, and of course that hurts a decent dog just as it does a decent man.

Your father and Mike are the best friends I have. One of them is the best man I know and the other is the best dog. Mike and I often talk about your father, and he and I talk about Mike. So, while they have never met but once, they feel well acquainted and entertain the most profound respect for each other.

Dogs know. They just smell around a man a little and look at him and size him up. Mike says that your father is a better man than I am, and I do not like that much, because I think a good deal of myself. But that is the beauty of dog language; it tells you the truth, and sometimes makes you feel small and mean. A man who has one real friend and one real dog is rich, Waldo; he has two things money can't buy, for a man who would sell a dog like Mike could not raise a dog like Mike, he would be too mean. You see, you educate the dog and he

Affairs of America To Fore In War News

Protest on Mail Interference and Proposal for Arms Embargo Constitute Interesting Phrase—Considerable Fighting Along French Front—Germans Report British in Serious Position in Arabia.

"Vexatiously inquisitorial," "unwarranted interference" and "impress upon Sir Edward Grey the necessity for prompt action in this matter" are among the terms employed in the protest of the American government to Great Britain against her interference with neutral mails, the text of which has been made public by Washington.

The tentative reply of Great Britain promises "before long" to state the result of a consultation that is going on between her and her allies with respect to the policy to be pursued.

Denunciation of the exportation of arms and munitions to the belligerents in the world war has been voiced in the United States senate by a dozen senators—Democrats and Republicans. The debate, which followed upon the presentation to the senate of a huge petition for the Organization of American Women for Strict Neutrality calling for the enactment of embargo legislation seemed to presage that a vote may be forthcoming upon the embargo.

The British labor congress while opposing by a large majority the provisions of the military service bill has defeated a proposal that the working-men should agitate for its repeal.

Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade in the British cabinet, has informed parliament that in order to relieve the pressure on shipping and make room in vessels for additional imports of foodstuffs, fuel, munitions and other essentials restrictions against importations of certain articles will be put into effect by the government.

In an address read at the prorogation of parliament until February 15, King George expressed in these words the determination of the entente allies to continue the war until victory is achieved: "We shall not lay down our arms, until we have vindicated the cause which carries with it the future of civilization."

Considerable fighting has been taking place along the entire French front. Berlin asserts that between 500 and 600 yards of French trenches were stormed by the Germans in the vicinity of Neuville and that French counterattacks were without result. In this region, the French assert, the Germans were driven from mine craters they had occupied and were repulsed in trying to recapture them; while the British report the progressive occupation by their men of mine craters and German listening posts in the Neuville region.

While considerable fighting has been going on along the Russian front from Riga into East Galicia, no important results have been attained by either side. The same is true as to the Austro-Italian front, the Caucasus region and the Balkans.

The British report that the Turks have evacuated their trenches on the land side of the Kut-el-Amara defenses to about a mile from the entrenchments occupied by the besieged British forces. The report says there is no change in the situation of the British force moving up the Tigris to the relief of Kut-el-Amara.

British possession of territory protecting the Suez canal route at its southern end is imperiled by attacks made by large bodies of Arabs and Turks on the British forces in southwestern Arabia, according to advices from German sources. The British have been driven from all the territory they held in that section of the country and have suffered extremely heavy losses in the fighting, the reports declare, the figures being given at 15,000 killed and 20,000 wounded.

The implication from the Berlin dispatch carrying these reports is that the British army of 20,000 men is virtually cooped up in Aden, near the entrance of the Red Sea, which must be held if the southerly approach to the Suez canal is to be protected.

A situation quite similar to this was reported through German agencies several weeks ago, but London then announced officially that no apprehensions were entertained of the outcome of the operations which had been merely in the nature of skirmishes.

The Austrians, having gained possession of nearly all of Montenegro, whose remaining defenders, according to Vienna, are fast laying down their arms, are pushing southward in Albania. Apparently they are moving deliberately although without encountering much resistance. Their road down the Adriatic seacoast leads them to Durazzo, but advices from Albania indicate that their progress is likely to be slow, owing to the condition of the roads.

At last accounts the Bulgarian forces co-operating with the Austrians had encountered the Albanian troops under Essad Pasha and, according to unofficial advices, had met with a defeat at the latter's hands.
