As an American He Fought the Ducl and How the Supreme Court Have Treated Their | Facts of Interest Gathered from Variou Killed the Cuban.

Soon after the Cubans were compelled to surrender the Virginius to Uncle Sam I landed in Havana as the agent of an American agricultural works, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. Fortunate for me in this case I could chatter away in Spanish with any of them, and though I was born and reared in Ohio I was supposed to be an Englishman. Had I given out that I was a straighthaired Yankee the chances of being mobbed or knifed or shot, would have been excellent. The feeling against Americans was so very bitter that one from the States was liable to insult and violence on the public streets.

I had been here about a week when an American named Charles Whitley, from Michigan arrived with his wife. Whit-Michigan, arrived with his wife. ley was an invalid, and he had come to Cuba by the advice of a physician. I remember him as a tall, pale-faced and extremely courteous gentleman, while she was a little bit of a woman who was hope and sunshine. It so happened that I made their acquaintance the first day they landed, and I felt it my duty to warn Whitley of the feeling entertained against our nationality. My advice to him was to keep close for a time and to carefully avoid being mixed up in any discussion of a public nature. He had been there a week without anything being said to him, when one day, as we sat in the hotel reading room, a couple of Cubans who spoke very good English came in and took seats near us. There was no doubt in my mind from the first that they meant to draw Whitley into a They began by abusing and maligning Americans and wishing for war, and when he persistently refused to take notice of them one of them deliberately turned upon him and said: "Havana is no place for such as von."

A New Postal Card.

The new postal card design, adopted bout a year ago, will soon be superseded y another, which has been prepared at bureau of engraving and printing, and which has been formally approved by Post-master General Vilas. When the last change of design was made there was some ceasion for haste, and there was difficulty bout getting rid of certain notions about he card that experience has removed. Mr. ilas last year took the best of the designs offered. It was an improvement, but still not entirely satisfactory. The new design will at once be accepted as an improvement upon that now in use. It consists of one piece of engraving instead of two pieces, as on the present card. A head of Jefferson, a miniature portrait after the original in the State department, occupies a central place on the upper third of the card. Over this head in light letters are the words "United States." In panels supported by carell reals at the supported by carell reals at the control of the carelland of the carellan supported by scroll work at the left and ight are the words, "postal card" in disinct letters. Under the head are the words one cent," and beneath the border line, nclosing the designation of value, is the ine "Nothing but the address to be on this side." The design is graceful and light, and its advantage over the old one is that the idea of putting the stamp off at one side and the designation of the article at the opposite side is abandoned to secure an exclusive design with the strongest feature of it in the centre. The Postmaster General may decide to print the new cards on white paper and in black ink, for the reason that white paper furnishes a better ground for written characters, helping the post office clerks who are compelled to decipher eddresses, and for the reason that the rown ink is complained of by the printers who use it as more troublesome to obtain good work with than the same quality of black ink. As there is a stock of about 12, 000,000 postal cards now on hand, it is probable that the new cards will not be out for a month or two.

A total eclipse of the sun occurs on the 29th, which will be visible as a very small partial eclipse in the southern part of New agland and the Atlantic States. ath of totality commences at the isthmus of Panama, crosses the northern part of South America, and some of the adjacent islands, crosses the Atlantic ocean in a southeasterly direction, strikes the coast of Africa near Benguela, and ends in Madagascar. The conditions for observing it are more favorable than they were in the total eclipse of 1883 and 1885, when the lines of totality passed almost entirely over the Southern Pacific ocean. Doubtless astronomers will be on hand at many points to observe the eclipse. The eclipse begins at Ch. 16m. A. Gentlemen-It is due you to say that I think I am entirely well of eczema after having Confidence—it is the you to say that I think I am onlinely well of cezema after naving taken Switt's Specific. I have been troubled with it very little in my face since last spring. At the benaming of cold weather last fall it made a slight appearance, but went away and has better returned. S.S.S. no doubt broke it my; at least it put my system in good condition and lead well. It also benefited my wife greatly in case of sick headache, and made a perfect care of a breaking out on my little three year old daughter last simmer.
