It will be remembered that when Black wood's application for a writ of habeas corpus was decided in his favor, instead of being turned loose, he was placed upon South Carolina soil, but, by a strange coin cidence, right within reach of some South Carolina constables, who had warrants for his arrest. It was supposed that immediately after his arrest application for a requisition would be made by the Augusta authorities. But so far there are no evidences of any such action. The decision of Judge Roney in this case seems to amuse a good many members of the profession in Atlanta. They say that the only question before the court was the legality of the arrest of the prisoner, and that that question could not have been made by the prisoner. That has been the universal decision. So Judge Roney must have released the prisoner because he found that his arrest was illegal and that the sovereign-that is the State of South Carolina -was demanding his release. There is no law on the face of the earth to sustain him in this position. It is not comity nor ex But the most tradition nor anything else. amusing fact connected with the whole affair was that Blackwood was not released If entitled to his liberty he ought to have walked out of the court house a free man. But it seems that while declaring that he ought to be released, the judge did not release him, but instead put him in custody of the sheriff to carry him back to South Carolina. The sheriff didn't carry him back to South Carolina, but carried him down below Augusta to Sand Bar Ferry, and put him in a boat and carried him over to the South Carolina coast on Beach Island, where two South Carolina officers stood ready to arrest him. "Who sent them to that particular point on the river?" asked a prominent attorney who was discussing the question yesterday "Who sent the sheriff with his prisoner several miles down the river when there was a broad bridge by which they could have crossed to Carolina? Where did Judge Roney find his authority for releasing a prisoner on habeas corpus and still holding him in custody? Who sent the sheriff down the river? All this may be very adroit management, but it isn't law. Such a decision will be ridiculed on both sides of the river.' This is a sample of the queries put by different members of the bar when discussderance of opinion seems to be that Judge Roney's decision is not good law, but while they criticise his decision, all join in paying the highest tribute to his character as a man and in expressing the belief that he has acted conscientiously throughout.

MORE OF BLACKWOOD.

Efforts to Bring About a Compromise in the Interests of Stone and McNally.

(From the Atlanta Constitution The friends of Stone and McNally, the two men charged with having kidnapped the forger Blackwood, are making a strong effort to bring about some compro mise by which these men may escape trial upon the charge hanging over their heads.

For some days the officers here have been expecting to receive an application for a requisition for Blackwood, but no such application has as yet been received.

It will be remembered that when the habeas corpus case was decided in favor of Blackwood the court, instead of ordering his release, turned him over to the custody of the sheriff of Richmond county, with in structions to "place him back upon South Carolina soil." This was done, but it was done in a way which indicates that there must have been some previous understanding between the authorities of Richmond county and those of Aiken county, S. C. A broad bridge joins Augusta and Ham-burg, and had the prisoner been released. and he should have been under the decision of the court, he would undoubtedly have made straight for that bridge as the shortest path to safety. It is natural to suppose, too, that the sheriff would ordinarily have taken Blackwood to South Carolina by this route.

Did he do this? Hardly. Mr. Sheriff evidently has a fondness for water routes, and to gratify this fondness takes his prisoner several miles down the river, where a row boat is obtained, and together they are landed on the South Carolina bank of the river. By a strange coincidence, several Aiken county constables happen to be at the same point at the same time and the result is Blackwood's ride to liberty is nothing more than a transfer from a jail in Georgia to one in South Carolina. Blackwood is supposed to be held until a requisition can be issued for him, but he is. in reality, being held until some sort of an agreement can be brought about.

Stone and McNally are considerably averse to being tried in South Carolina for kidnapping, and if they can effect some ar rangement by which the wounded honor of the State of South Carolina can be ap peased they will gladly do so. As the matter now stands they are to be turned over to the authorities of Aiken county, S. C., as soon as the cases pending in Georgia courts are decided.

It is stated upon good authority that their attorneys have made a proposition to drop the prosecution against Blackwood in case the same is done with the cases against Stone and McNally.

This is the same proposition that was made by their friends before the habcas corpus case was decided. The South Car olina authorities refused to entertain it then and it does not seem likely that they will do so now. If this fails, a compromise will be sought on some other basis.

In the meantime Blackwood languishes

Effic Shallers is the mother of four children, all of them, however, were said to have been still born. On Saturday last her fourth child was born. No one was present with her but her moth er, Jane Shaller. It was regarded as a suspicious circumstance in the neighborhood that all her children should have been born dead, so a physician was sent for and an examination was made of the child. The physician removed one of the lungs of the child and placing it in water found that it floated, which showed that the child had once breathed. On further examination its neck and shoulders were found to be broke The women both persisted that the child was born dead. Warrants were taken out for them and they were held for trial on a

WHAT THE PAPERS SAY.

The Pardon of Amaker. (Anderson Intelligencer.) The News and Courier criticises the action of Governor Richardson in commu-ting the sentence of an Orangeburg murderer from death to imprisonment for life. The jury recommended the prisoner to mercy, the Judge recommended the com mutation of the sentence to a term of years less than the life time of the prisoner, and the Solicitor recommended the commuta Every one, therefore, officially connected with the case, who heard the trial, Judge, Jury, Solicitor, and prominent citizens, recommended a commutation. believe in a rigid enforcement of the law in all cases, but it does strike us as a little unreasonable to criticise a Governor for com muting a sentence under these circumstances. To have refused, would have been bloodthirsty and inhuman on the part of the Governor. Human life, even that of a criminal, should only be taken in extreme cases, and the Governor has been given the commuting and pardoning power to correct those cases in which the penalties prescribed by law are too rigorous for the circumstances of the case, or in which error is made to appear. All the officers representing the State expressed the opin ion that the punishment was too cevere for the circumstances of the case, and the Governor was right, we think, in commuting the death penalty to imprisonment for life.

A Backsliding Contemporary. (Newberry Observer.)

The News and Courier nominates Hon. C. II. Simonton, of Charleston, Judge of the United States District Court of South Carolina, as the successor of Associate Justice Woods, deceased, and urges, among the reasons why the President should appoint him, that Judge Simonton has been 'a Democrat from his youth up." Judge Simonton is worthy of all the praise our contemporary bestows upon him. and is worthy and competent to fill the po sition in the United States Supreme Court. Indeed South Carolina has no worthier son than Charles H. Simonton, and his appointment would be gratifying to the people of the State

All this is true, as every one knows who knows Mr. Simonton, either personally or by reputation. But it grieves us beyond measure to see our esteemed contemporary come down from its lofty and unpartisan pinnacle of civil service and advocate the appointment of a man because he is "a Democrat" at all; and it grieves us most of all that it even advocates one because he is not only "a Democrat," but has been "a Democrat from his youth up."

We fear our contemporary has fallen from its grand elevation down into the mire and dirt of partisan politics among the rest of us poor spoilsmen.

About the Legislature. (Newberry Herald and News.)

We think it would be a good idea for the law to be so changed that the members of the Legislature be elected for a term of four years and have only one session every two years. We have too much legislation: too much making and unmaking of laws. Too much of our legislation is hurrically done, but to be undone at the next session of the Legislature. The Legislature should meet only once in two years, and should stay in session until matters needing atten tion were carefully and deliberately considered and acted upon, then there would be very little, or at least much less, need of constantly amending and changing the laws already made. There is too much special legislation

Grant's Orders to Sheridan.

In connection with the criticisms made by General Rosecrans on General Sheri-dan's ravages in the valley of Virginia sent by General Grant to General Sheridan, from August to November, 1864, have been made public, which show that the devastation wrought by Sheridan was committed partly under General Grant's orders. Under date of August 16, 1864, General Grant directed Sheridan to send a division of cavalry through London county to "destroy and carry off crops, animals, negroes and all men under lifty years of age capable of bearing arms. In this way you will get many of Mosby's men." Under date of August 26, General Grant ordered Sheridan to "do all the damage to railroads and crops that you can, carry off stock of all descriptions and negroes, so as to prevent further planting. If the war is to last another year we want the Shenandoah Valley to remain a barren waste." In November he suggested to General Sheridan that it would be advisible to "notify all citizens living east | ceeds of sale of swamp lands against the of the Blue Ridge to move north of the Potomac all their stock, grain and provisions of every description." "There is no doubt," General Grant continued, "about the necessity of cleaning out that country so that it will not support Mosin's gang. So long as the war lasts these people must be prevented from raising another crop, both there and as high up the valley as we can control."

Seventy-Nine Snakes and Seven 'Possums

Martin Diet, while at work on a piece of ground near the residence of Joseph Puper, Garden City Park, found a nest of black snakes, about thirty in all, which he killed in a few minutes. The following day he found a batch of fortynine more, near the same place, which his two dogs killed. The snakes were evidently hibernating, not having awakened from their winter's lethargy, and so became easy victims to the farmer and his two dogs. The largest snake measured five feet seven inces. $1.00 WORTH $500.00 For four years I have been a sufferer from a terrible form of Rheumatism, which reduced me so low that all hope of recovery was given up. I have suffered the most exeruciating pain day and night, and often while writhing in agony have wished I could die. I have tried everything known for that disease, but nothing did me any good, and have had some of the finest physicians of the State to work on me, but all to no effect. I have spent over $800 without finding relief. I am now proud to say that after using only one bottle of B. B. B. I am enabled to walk around and attend to business, and I would not take $500 for the benefit received from one single bot-E. O. GARA.

Gentlemen-It is due you to say that I think I am entirely well of eczems after having taken Swift's Specific. I have been troubled with it very little in my face since last spring. At the beginning of cold weather last fall it made a slight appearance, but went away and has never feutract. S. S. S. no doubt broke it up; at least it but my system in good condition and I got well. It also benefited my wife greatly in case of sick headache, and made a perfect cure of a breaking out on my little three year old daughter last summer.
