For the past few weeks it has just been impossible to get out a supplement, and it was equally impossible to get in all the matter we wished.

This week all editorial matter is crowded out, as well as several communications.

Among these communications is one from

A depression in the money markets causes manufacturers who are often caught with their paper in bank, to unload their stocks at a sacrifice in order to meet their paper and save themselves from financial ruin. It is then that the Levi Brothers step in with their immense cash capital and make investments at such reduced figures that about 19 years of age, died suddenly they can afford to sell their goods at factory on the 21st instant. To the Editor of The News and Courier: This year I have had a very pleasant correspondence with a gentleman who, during a portion of the Confederate war, was Gen. Grant's military secretary. Early in 1863 he entered the volunteer service, and was mus-tered out as a brevet brigadier general at the close of the war. Besides being Gen. Grant's military secretary, he was also assistant adjutant general on his staff. When Gen. Lee surrendered at Appomattox this gentleman engrossed Gen. Grant's terms of surrender. These facts alone would make him a person of interest, but there are other onnected with him which double the interest, for he is not only a full-blooded Indian, but is also a celebrated Indian Gen. Parker is of the Seneca Nation, the same nation which produced the illustrious orator Red Jacket. He was born on the Tonawanda reservation in Western New York. After the Confederate war he entered 1872 he severed his connection with govern-mental affairs. I have found the General to be a genial
