NEW ORLEANS, May 5 .- The long delayed report of the grand jury on the parish prison-Italian affair last March, was presented late last evening to Judge Marr, in the Criminal Court. The report, which is very voluminous, reviews the circumstances connected with the murder of Chief Hennessey, the trial of the prisoners and the affair at the prison, and concludes by justify- the convention to order, said: ing the citizens, and presents no indictments. The report is signed by all the Democratic party will be promoted by jurors. The report concludes as fol-

In view of this consideration, the thorough examination of the subject has failed to disclose the necessary facts to justify this grand jury in presenting

NOTHING ELSE WAS EXPECTED. WASHINGTON, May 6.—The failure convention.—Register. of the grand jury in New Orleans to find indictments against the leaders of the mob that lynched the Italians in the parish prison in New Orleans last March is the general discussion here. This disposal of the case causes no surprise here, for nothing else was expected. Government officials will not talk about the matter, and the Marquis Imperali refuses to discuss the subject.

At the State Department the attempt on the part of the jury to excuse the infraction of the law by offsetting it with the alleged attempts at jury-fix-ing is deprecated, but there is a well defined opinion that on the whole the outcome of the case will be beneficial in its effects upon the turbulent foreign elements in the United States, inasmuch as it will make clear to them the fact that they cannot rely on treaties to escape responsibility to the great public for their unlawful acts.

The report, it is believed, differs in the matter of the nationality of the victims, from the report of District Attorney Grant, now in the hands of the attorney general. The grand jury found thas eight of them were naturalized citizens, and that one had declared his intention to become naturalized, while the District Attorney, it is believed, found that one of the victims was an Italian, but an escaped convict, and that another's nationality was so poubtful as to make it unsafe to hazard an opinion. So at its worst, the Italian complaints will be narrowed down to two persons, and one of them an escaped convict.

A cancerous affection had destroyed the left side and lower portion of her nose. The operation was performed last Saturday afternoon. Firt, the diseased flesh was cut away.

Then a flap of skin and flesh of the proper size and form to replace the lost portion of the nose was cut from above the muscle of the left arm. The flap was allowed to remain attached to the arm on one side. The arm was then raised to the face and over the head in such a manner as to permit the flesh of the arm to be grafted and stitched to the edges of the lost portion of the nose. The arm was then placed in a specially constructed harness and securely strapped up to the face in that

The operation promises to be entirely successful. The living flesh of the arm has grown to the nose, and it is expected that Saturday the flap will be severed where it still adheres to the arm and the slight remaining operation of fitting and stitching the remaining edge to the nose will then be performed.
