When Congressman McLaurin returned to Washington he found his presence necessary to break up the filibustering tactics of the Republicans, and his arrival was gratifying to his Democratic colleagues. McLaurin would not be himself if he left a point uncovered and he reminded his colleagues when the post office tight was on, the Reform congressmen of this State were not considered Democrats, but now when the tariff war is waging the Reformers of South Carolina are sent after to share in the load of Democratic responsibilities. South Carolina Reformers are no good when federal patronage is to be bestowed, but they are the boys when it comes to carrying out the pledges of the Democracy.
