RELIGIOUS THOUGHTS.

BY REV. J. O. GOUGH, MANNING, S. C. DAMBLING A HORBID SIN IN THE SIGHT OF

GOD, AND A VIOLATION OF THE LAW

OF THE STATE A few weeks ago I had a short article up on the tendency of this growing sin, with no intention of wounding any one's feelings, but with a desire to do my duty to God and my fellow-man, What I said was from the purest motives. I desired to point out to those who were engaged therein the dangers that lay along this road, feeling that some did not know the crimes attached to it. I also felt that when a citizen and friend was led into the light and shown the disgrace to which his conduct was leading him, he would prefer his charwas leading him, he would prefer his character and good name to the mere "chance" in gambling. Solomon said, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." But I met with much discouragement and personal threats. I did not think that what I said then, or now, would stop the sin altogether, but thought that it might serve as a warning. But I see that like the man in his boat passing swiftly down the rushing current to the awfur abyss, fearing no danger and not heeding the warning voice of his friends, he passes over to an awful wreck, so men continue to gamble in our own midst, in more ways than one.

The heathenish practice of cock-fighting still continues. To day I venture to say some things on this sin that I trust all who read the Times may see.

Dr. Geo. F. Hall says that "gambling i the art of getting something for nothing It is a sin that is corrupting thousands men from nearly every walk of life. The public conscience is not yet awakened to the awful sin. No man can long retain his personal purity of life who gives him-self over to gambling, to this subtle agent of hell." Henry Ward Beecher says, "Gambling is the staking or winning of property upon mere hazard. The husbandman renders produce for his gains; the mechanic renders the product of labor and skill for his gain; the gambler renders for his gain the sleight of useless skill, or more often downright cheating. Betting is gambling and there is no honest equivolent to its gain."

Dr. R. S. McArthur says, "I have no patience with a man who gambles. A man who will gamble will steal. Gambling is a species of theft. A man who wants some-thing for nothing is a dishonest man. The man who says the world owes me a living and I propose to have it' is a reckless and dishonest man. The world does not owe him a living. The world owes a man just whose passion is influenced, beware! Your eye has already lost its honest glance, your taste has lost its purity, your heart throbs with poison, your feet stand on slippery places, whence in due time they shall slide. They shall slide from heaven never to be visited by a gambler; slide down to that fiery abyss below you, out of which none ever come. Then when the last fight has been pitched, the battle over and your soul lost; when the echo of your soul strikes the dark shades of hell; in malignant triumph shall the rich gambler, who cunningly played for your soul, have his prey. Too late you shall look back upon life as a mighty game in which you were the stake and satan the winner. "What shall a man give in exchance for his soul?" Not only is gambling a sin in the sight of God, but an open defiance to the law of the State in which we live. Shall we allow men to gamble at our own doors and boas and brag of their greety gains, and the honest citizens say nothing of it? Shall the officers of the law, who are sworn to ex-ecute the law, close their eyes and refuse to look upon a gambling scene?

Shall the Christian people allow their boys led astray by those corruptors of youth and still be innocent? I have seen boys from the ages of nine to fifteen place to fight, following in the footsteps of the gamblers. In the name of God, honest citizens of the town of Manning, is this crime nothing to you? Then do away with your officers and crime do their work.

Only last week within three miles of our court house, men whose names are known and can be proven, fought their game cocks and gambled thereon, and after the fight proudly walked our streets and talked and boasted of their gain, in open defiance of the law, and in the teeth of honest Chris-tian citizens. Where are the officers of the law? Every one who is guilty of betting which is gambling, should be arrested at once, and not allowed to carry on their hellish work in our midst.
