AN EXPENSIVE SESSION.

The Legislature was to have adjourned last Saturday, but it did not, owing to the vast amount of matter still unground in the legislative mill. Without a doubt, this Legislature has worked harder without accomplishing anything, other than to raise the tax levy, than any Legislanumber of years. The bills ratified case which is presented to them, and ture assembled at Columbia in a and which are now laws, with but very few exceptions, have no bearing on the people. If anything has been to done raise the free schools from a little better than a farce we have been unable to see or hear of it. If there was any legislation which would make the machinery less cumberannual sessions of the General Assembly and would be glad if the constitution could be amended to have one session every five years, and if the body is to be made up of material similar to that which represents us now, we think one session to celebrate each centennial would be
