It is hardly necessary to call attention to to C. W. Kendall's half page advertisement. Tor it speaks for itself in more emphatic tones than any words from us. Kendall he holds that belief he is going to send out a feeler to entice them into his store. Kendall claims it is cheaper to advertise and let the people know where they can secure bargains than it is to hire a clerk to wipe the mould off shoes or brush the dust from dry goods. The people of Clarendon have been taught to learn that the merchant who follows Kendall must keep up a rapid pace or get left and they are always pleased to see his name in print.
