Supervisor Owens had an experience which seems to abound in mystery Last Saturday afternoon some of his children found a young crippled part-ridge in his field, and they took it home for treatment, placed it in a cigar box and put it on the mantle in Mr. Owens' room. Sunday morning Mr. Owens looked into the box, and instead of one little partridge he found another the same size as the crippled one. How the second bird got into that box is a mystery, as Mr. Owens declares that no one outside of his family had been about the place, and all of them are as much mystified as he is. We have heard of men seeing snakes, but the family would not see the things at the same time. How did the second bird get
