SLAVERY IN MORO.

Governor Taft Tells of One of Our New Possessions.

The Whole Population Anxious to Considered Slaves So as > to Mulct the United States Government.

The extent of slavery in the Philippines was discussed by governor Taft Wednesday in response to questions by members. He said slavery was confined to the southern Moro islands. The investigations made by Governor Taft and his associates had brought out that the slaves included men, women and children who were slaves for debt, according to the statements made by the datos. The slaves could buy their liberty, but until this was members of the family and the relation was comparatively mild, if it was possible to consider any form of slavery as mild. Governor Taft said Dago Mandi had already abolished slavery by decree. How effective this was could not be stated. "It indicates," said Governor Taft, "how willing they are to consider our desires and the possibilities of eradicating the system."

The civil authorities had never recognized slavery in any way he said, and the military had always released slaves, but the slaves did not understand the advantage of liberty and Governor Taft said that if we attempted to end slavery by force we would probably find the slaves turning their guns against us. The influence of the United States was, however, growing stronger and stronger for the eradication of slavery. Although our wishes had been made known, yet neither the civil or military authorities had said slavery must cease or war would be made. Representative Patterson of Tennessee, asked the number of slaves. Gov ernor Taft replied that he and his associates had sought to learn the number with the idea that we might buy them and avert an exercise of force. But when the natives learned this they all represented themselves as slaves. The governor estimated about one-fourth of this southern population as slaves, or from 250,000 to 300,000 in a population of 1,000,000 to 1,500,-000. When asked how many sultans there were Governor Taft answered that sultans and datos were as numer-

A Terrible Cost.

Seldom has a nation miscalculated worse than has Great Britain in estimating the difficulties it had to face in the Boer war. When the British government undertook to conquer the Boers its expectation was that less than 50,000 men and less than $50,-000,000 would be sufficient to end the struggle in less than six months. The war has been going on about three years and has cost more than $800,-000,000. The British force in South Africa at the last account was 237,000 men and the British loss by death and permanent disabilities has amounted above 25,000. The total number of casualties including the wounded who have recovered, at the last report, was 100,701 men and 5,240 officers. Seldom in modern times has such a bloody war been waged anywhere and the proportionate loss of officers has been the greatest in all history. tionably a great part of the loss both of men and money has been due to
