The general outlook for a full crop of all kinds of fruit in this section is favorable so far. What the insects will do for these crops later, however, is a matter that cannot be foretold. "Insects," said Mr. Bauer, "are the greatest of the farmer's enemiesworms, grubs and scale insects of various kinds. This condition may be said to be due to the steadily increasing prevalence of the small boy with the gun. These boys who are out shooting robbins ought to be spanked. every one of them. Every robbin they kill is worth from $5 to $10 in the number of insects it would destroy if allowed to live. I mention the robbin particularly because he is above all others an insectiverous bird, though of course all birds are more or less so. Birds are, therefore, the farmer's best friends, and unless more effective means are adopted by the legislature to protect them and encourage their propagation the insects will become increasingly victorious in their war on the growing crops.

"If the birds had been let alone in the last decade there would be enough of them here now to hold the army of insects in check. Nature is amply able to take care of hereself. She had provided birds to hold these insects in check. To see people interfere with the scheme of nature with their eves wide open and then to mourn over the consequences is one of the most pathetic sights I know of."
