DREAD OF HUMANITY

I am compelled by a sense of gratitude to tell you the great good your remedy has done me in a case of Contagious Blood Poison. Among other symptoms I was severely afflicted with Rheumatism, and got almost past going. The disease got a firm hold upon my system; my blood was thoroughly poisoned with the virus. I lost in weight, was run down, had sore throat, eruptions, spots, and other evidences of the disease. I was truly in a bad shape when I began the use of S. S. S., but the persistent use of it brought me out of my trouble safe and sound, and I have the courage to publicly testify to the virtues of your great blood remedy, S. S. S., and to recommend it to all blood-poison sufferers, sincerely believing if it is taken according to directions, and given a fair trial, it will thoroughly eliminate every particle of the virus. ODD OCEAN FREIGHT.

CARGOES THAT ARE CARRIED FREE FROM PORT TO PORT.

Involuntary Passengers That at Times Travel on Shipboard—Insects and Animals That Voyage All Over the Civilized World.

Many strange and weird things inhabit foreign bound ships in the form of animals and insects that are rarely suspected and never seen by the ordinary passenger. Most people are aware that the presence of rats on board ship is inevitable, whether the vessel be of wood or iron. Indeed, sailors consider them safe shipmates and sure signs that the vessel is seaworthy and not in danger of sinking.

The sight of rats deserting a ship is sufficient to discourage any sailor from going on board for a trip; but on the other hand, too many rodents on board spoil everything. Numbers make them bold, and instead of staying in the hold where the cargo is stored they invade the sailors' quarters and even make their appearance in the captain's cabin.

But rats are not by any means the only strange visitors that travel in ships without the consent of either owner or captain. There are many insects that migrate from one quarter of the globe to another by means of the vessels which ply between distant ports. Indeed, the spread of nearly all kinds of living creatures has been dependent on the ships of civilized nations. Winged pests and blessings have been steadily carried to new countries by this means.

Not long ago a ship from one of the tropical countries was followed by a swarm of butterflies, which persistently hovered round the rigging of the vessel until the shore was lost in the mists; then the insects alighted on the masts and decks. A few disappeared in the night and were destroyed in the water or reached shore safely. Some of the others hid away in the cabins and hold of the ship.

After a trip of some thirty days the vessel reached England, and from their hiding places in the ship a few of these butterflies emerged and flew ashore. Thus an entirely new species of butterfly was introduced into the country. Cockroaches are too ancient an importation to be worthy of more than a passing notice. Grain carrying ships are overrun with weevils, and these grubs do an immense amount of harm to the cargoes.

Ships engaged in fruit carrying from warm countries are often visited by a veritable host of insects of queer creatures. Concealed in the bunches of bananas there may be poisonous reptiles and insects that have traveled half round the globe. They may sting or bite the hand of some receiver of fruit or they may be killed before they have inflicted any harm. Sometimes, however, they escape ashore, and if the new country proves congenial to their growth and multiplication they may in a very short time establish a progeny that will eventually spread in all directions. Poisonous snakes of the tropics have thus been introduced into lands where none was ever known to exist before. Moths of a destructive nature constantly come to this and other countries in the fruit ships, and their spread is only a matter of time and opportunity.

They are visitors that cause no trouble to the sailors, who are very often not even aware of their presence on board, but they prove expensive to the farmers and inhabitants of the land where they become established.

Even flowers and plants from other countries bring with them new migrants in the shape of bugs, beetles and other creatures. Concealed in the blooms or curled up leaf of the plants, they remain dormant during the long voyage, but when they reach a land where climate and surroundings are conducive to their propagation and active growth they come forth to establish themselves in the land of their adoption.

Thus from the West Indies we have brought insects by the hundreds concealed in the beautiful Easter Lily blossoms, and from all parts of the world strange insects hidden away in the cuplike bloom of orchids, which hunters risked their lives to secure, have been introduced in our midst to work destruction or add to our pleasures. Not all visitors on our incoming ships are obnoxious. Some are of distinct value to our country, and their introduction in this secret way very often works out successfully problems of great public and commercial value.

Most travelers to India and China will remember the revulsion of feeling with which they were seized on first detecting a scorpion or mosquito in their soup at luncheon or dinner. Some of the liners which are kept constantly for the traffic from Aden to Bombay and known as the Red sea boats are never free from these pests.

With the tramp ships that visit the south Pacific coasts and parrots are the most common visitors. It is a very frequent occurrence, after a "tramp" has not touched at any port for a week or so, for the sailors to find that their food is continually being stolen. They know at once that monkeys are on board. A vigorous search is instituted, with the result that at least one monkey is shortly afterward found, and sometimes half a dozen. These animals resist capture at first, but soon accept the inevitable and become in a very short time great chums with the sailors. When England is reached Jack takes them ashore and disposes of them for ready cash to dealers in the neighborhood of the docks. Many of the parrots brought to the country have been visitors on "tramp" boats—London Tit-Bits.

Worshippers of Strange Gods.

Snake worshippers are more numerous than river worshippers in the Punjab. They have always been a large denomination in heathen countries. Why they worship snakes is a problem that has been frequently discussed to no particular purpose. But people who worship owls, bats, lobsters, rats and mice will worship anything, and perhaps snake worshippers are so common merely because snakes are so widely distributed and so far from exclusive in their habits. If a man worships an opossum or an ornithomys, he may go to Australia to do so, but serpents are everywhere. So is the earth (Frith), and the earth, as Hertha, Demeter and under many other names, has never wanted adorers.

Even the untutored Pawnees are earth worshippers and bury articles by way of sacrifice, which is more economical than burning them, as they can be dug up again. The ancestral mound is a good deal adored in the Punjab. In Scotland it became the fairy hill, as at Aberfoyle, and was treated with comparative respect in times comparatively modern. The church was usually built as near it as possible, perhaps to counteract the influence of the ancestral mound or to acquire any local sacredness that might be going.—London News.

The Ballot and Office.

In 1777 it was written into the constitution of Vermont that "the house of freemen of this state shall consist of persons most noted for wisdom and virtue, to be chosen by ballot, by the freemen of every town in the state."

Time and conditions have lowered our standard. We are content with average wisdom and average virtue, and in years of apathy virtue and wisdom are quite forgotten, and we elect whom the machine nominates. Rotation in office, party control of nominating machinery, the ambitions of corporations and of party leaders—these are the forces that move the pawns on the legislative chessboard. Under the political conditions which the majority of the voters tolerate can we expect the legislature of a state to be composed of the best men of the community? And we know that the real danger of the democracy is the withdrawal of intelligent and humble men from public duties.—S. P. Orth in Atlantic.

A Sarcenic Definition.

George Reno, an American newspaper man who went to Havana and obtained work on a daily paper there, did not get on well with the managing editor, a former Chicago physician. They disliked each other extremely, and the editor took particular pleasure in mangling Reno's copy beyond all recognition. One night Reno protested at some blue penciling that was done. "I recognize your right to edit my stuff, doctor," said he, "but I must beg you to do so in such manner that you will not split all of the infinitives. In this instance you have made my copy over into a bundle of phraseological kindling wood." In reply, from the erudite managing editor: "You seem to be worrying yourself over a mere trifling, Mr. Reno. What is a split infinitive anyway?" "A split infinitive," replied Reno after a moment of thought, "is an attachment used on farms. It is a small implement that we fasten to the nose of a calf when we wish to wean it from its mother."

By the Tonic Route.

The pills that act as a tonic, and not as a drastic purgative, are Dr. King's Little Early Risers. They cure Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, etc. Early Risers are small, easy to take and easy to act—a safe pill. Mack Hamilton, hotel clerk at Valley City, N. D., says: "Two bottles cured my chronic constipation." Sold by The R. B. Loryea Drug Store.

Flight of the Woodcock.

Some writers have claimed that the woodcock is sure in his flight, never becoming entangled in briars or creeping vines when in swift flight through close cover. That may have been their experience, but it is not mine. I have seen woodcocks when flushed in such spots become so entangled that they were forced to cease flying and drop to the ground to again make a new start in flying. I remember one old fellow that sat hidden before the stand of one of my setters until I almost stepped on him and then, rising nearly into my face, got tangled in a clump of ironweed and fell at my feet. Had I been so disposed I could have caught him in my hands, but my desire was to see if he was injured, and a moment later he proved that he was only a badly frightened woodcock, as he darted away through cover while I watched and laughed at him.—Amateur Sportsman.

Are You Engaged?

Dagged people should remember that after marriage many quarrels can be avoided by keeping their digestive organs in good condition with Electric Bitters. Dr. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C., says: "For years my wife suffered intensely from dyspepsia, complicated with a torpid liver, until she lost her strength and vigor, and then became a mere wreck of her former self. Then I used Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy." The R. B. Loryea Drug Store sells and guarantees them at 50c a bottle.

Avoiding a Quarrel.

On one occasion when interposing in a quarrel Lord North observed that there was often far too much readiness to take offense. "That is not my case," he added. "This very evening one member who spoke of me described me as 'that thing called a minister.' Well, to be sure," continued Lord North, here patting his ample side, "I am an unwieldy thing. The honorable member therefore when he called me 'a thing' said what was true, and I could not be angry with him. But he added that thing called a minister he called me that thing which of all things he himself wished most to be, and therefore I took it as a compliment."

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria St. Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overworked, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and thank this medicine that I won my seat in the council. This remedy is for sale by The R. B. Loryea Drug Store, Isaac M. Notice to Teachers.

The State Board of Education at a recent meeting revised the list of colleges whose diplomas exempt graduates from teachers' examinations and declared illegal all certificates issued on diplomas from schools and colleges not included in the list. The list now reads: South Carolina College, Clemson College, Furman University, Clemson College, South Carolina Military Academy, Erskine College, Newberry College, Greenville Female College, Chocoma College, Limestone Female College, Converse College, Western Female College, Presbyterian College for Women, Wintthrop College, Lander Female College, Presbyterian College of South Carolina, Due West Female College, Charleston College, Ferninger Normal School, (Colored); Clifton University, State Colored College, Benedict Institute, Avery Normal Institute, Allen University.

The board also decided to include in the next teachers' examination, questions from Highe's Mistakes in Teaching, Peterman's Civil Government and Current History, and recommend that the teachers read the Vision of Sir Launfal and the Last of the Mohicans between now and the examination. The State Superintendent directs me to urge the teachers to procure all of these books if possible, but at least see that all get Highe's Mistakes in Teaching and Peterman's Civil Government. These two I have on hand and the others I will get with pleasure on short notice. The Little Chronicle, published in Chicago, is recommended for current history. We have a few teachers whose credentials are affected by this ruling of the State Board, and we deem it impractical and indeed unwieldy to attempt any change whatever during the present term.

There will be two examinations during the year, one in May and one in September, which will give every one ample opportunity to legally qualify before the commencement of the next school term.

DEAR SIR: The State Board passed a resolution saying that the successful completion of nine courses at the State Summer School will entitle teachers to a State certificate, and that nine courses at the county or district summer school will entitle teachers to a county certificate. That will prohibit the granting of certificates for attendance upon only one session of summer schools.

Druid Money.

Druid money expressed one of the many plausible ways of refusing to pay at all, so common to all peoples. It is the exact equivalent of the Roman phrase to pay on the Greek calendar, which meant never, as the Greeks had no calendars. Patricius says of the Druids that they constantly received money which they promised to return in another life. Butler in "Hudibras" refers to this:

Like money by the Druids borrowed, In t'other world to be restored.

The same tricks are played in the eastern as in the western world, for Purchas in his "Pilgrims" tells us of certain priests of Peking who give of certain bills of exchange, to be paid in heaven a hundredfold.—London Express.

S. I. Till on the Market.

NEW YORK, February 25, 1905.

Mr. Louis Appelt, Manning, S. C.

DEAR SIR:—Please say through your paper to the people and our customers and friends that I am here with the cash in hand hunting goods to suit 5 and 6-cent cotton.

Never before have I been in such a position to get goods like I am getting them now. The fall in the price of cotton has certainly changed things up here, so many merchants from the South are not coming to New York this spring or not until very late, and I never have had such values offered me. Thousands and thousands of dollars worth of goods were bought by these wholesalers before cotton went down and now as the goods are on hand and must be sold, they are cutting the price on some things to almost half and there are so many small lots or jobs—lots that they offer as baits to try and do the business.

I wish I had one hundred stores to buy for. I have just closed a trade on a lot of shoes at less than the actual sales cost. These are only baits they are offering to catch me on regular goods or to get all my business. I have bought hats so cheap that if after I get home and get them in if any one will come to me and show me that they are not able to buy a hat I will gladly give him one.

I have made arrangements with Mr. Finlayson of 450 Broadway to handle those "old-folks" Bibles at $1. I have big lots of them. The people down there need not lose a 2-cent stamp and take the chances of losing their dollar in the mails, but just send or go to J. W. McLEOD'S on Levi block and get one and examine it before they buy it.

I have bought about 300 Ladies' Hats, trimmed and untrimmed, at just half price.

Dry goods are cheaper than 5c. cotton. I have bought about 200 pieces of real nice wide colored Lawns for spring dresses to sell at 5c. yard, worth 10c.

The whole city is wrapped in snow about eight inches deep, but you don't see any snowfalling here, folks have too hard a time getting along on the streets in the big crowds. I think while we were getting all that rain down there these folks were getting snow.
