

S.S.S. STANDARD TONIC

The ingredients of which S. S. S. is composed, and the method of combining and preparing them so that they gently and pleasantly build up and strengthen every part of the body, make it the ideal tonic for a disordered condition of the system. Every one feels the need of a tonic sometimes. The system seems to get "out of gear," the appetite becomes fickle, the energies are depressed, sleep is not restful or refreshing, and the entire body has a nervous, worn-out feeling. When the system is in this depleted, run-down condition it must be aided by a tonic, and S. S. S. is recognized everywhere as the standard. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and berries selected for their gentle action as well as their invigorating effect on the system, it will not disagreeably affect any of the delicate members or tissues as do most of the so-called tonics on the market which contain potash or some other harmful mineral ingredient. These derange the stomach and digestion, unfavorably affect the bowels or otherwise damage the health. S. S. S. tones up the stomach and digestion, improves the appetite, produces refreshing sleep, rids the body of that tired, run-down feeling, and supplies tone and vigor to the entire system. It re-establishes the healthy circulation of the blood, acts more promptly and gives better and more lasting results than any other tonic, and because of its vegetable purity is an absolutely safe medicine for young or old. S. S. S. acts admirably in cases of dyspepsia, indigestion and other stomach troubles, and after using it that uncomfortable feeling of fullness, dizziness or drowsiness, after eating, are no longer felt. Not only is S. S. S. the greatest of all tonics but it possesses purifying and alterative properties, and if there is a taint in the blood it will promptly remove every trace and restore perfect health. In selecting your tonic for this year do not experiment but get S. S. S., the recognized standard.

MAKING A CUP OF TEA

THE WAY TO GET THE THEINE AND AVOID THE TANNIN.

Dark Liquid Does Not Mean Excellent. The Darker the Liquid Is the More Evil Are Its Effects. Chinese Tea Is Said to Be the Best.

Perhaps I may be allowed to make some comments on a subject that is of interest to all homes—namely, a cup of tea and the making of it. The first proposition is that the dark color of tea does not mean excellence, the second that the darker the liquid is the more evil are its effects and the third that the best tea is Chinese. These are the opinions of an importer. It is worth noting, I think, that they are also the scientific opinions and, further, that this is a case where doctors agree. What must properly be described as the pharmacology of tea is simple and well understood, and as it concerns every one it may be briefly discussed here.

For practical purposes tea consists of two things, the first being tannic acid, also known as tannin, and the second being theine, also known as caffeine. Let us consider each of these. The tannin, or tannic acid, occurs in the tea leaf, as in so many other plants. It is less readily soluble than the theine and is much less readily obtained from the Chinese leaf than from the Indian, the latter, together with the Cingales, containing much more of this substance. Tannic acid has no attractions for the palate except in the case of people who like a little bitterness, and it has no action on the nervous system, none of it, indeed, being absorbed by the body. Its action upon the system which it comes into immediate contact is wholly deleterious. I do not say that it is necessarily serious, but what action there is is wholly bad. Notably does it interfere with the digestibility of foodstuffs. Plainly, therefore, a chief concern in the production of the best beverage from tea should be reduction of the tannic acid to a minimum. This is to be accomplished, first, by using the leaf which contains least of it, and, secondly, by sharply limiting the length of the infusion. It has been clearly proved that practically all the theine that can be obtained from the leaf is obtained in the first three minutes, whereas the amount of tannin increases markedly even between the twentieth and fortieth minutes.

In the opinion of not a few, the said tannin is largely responsible for the deleterious effects frequently attributed to the theine. This last is an invaluable ingredient of tea; it is the same substance as that which gives its value to coffee, but is present in less abundance in the tea leaf than in the coffee bean; it is a nervous stimulant of the purest kind and belongs to an entirely different class from the pseudo-stimulants, such as alcohol. In some ways this is one of the most remarkable of all known drugs. It appears to be unique in that it stimulates the functions of the cerebellum, the highest portion of the brain, without inducing any subsequent reaction that can be detected. It has no second stage of action comparable to that of alcohol and opium, and in cases of emergency it is capable of postponing sleep for hours, and, more than that, of maintaining the mental activity as in the daytime. I may confess that in the next years I have systematically used caffeine for weeks on end for this purpose without any deleterious results; but this is quoted for illustration, not imitation.

Now, it is plain that, so far as the remote consequences of a cup of tea are considered, it is the theine or caffeine that we desire, and the tannin that we do not desire. The relative solubility of the two substances exactly suits our convenience. If it were necessary to extract all the tannin in order to get any theine there might be some excuse for the lady who likes her tea to have a little "body" to it, or for the servant who keeps her teapot on the hob all day. But the fact is that it is possible to obtain all the theine desired, while reducing the amount of tannin to a minimum. At present the public taste is thoroughly vitiated. No one who has given the matter a fair consideration, or who cares to permit any palatal delicacy at all, will question that the fine aroma of a cup of properly made Chinese tea is in a different category altogether from the sensations aroused by the concentrated solution of tannin, which is usually offered under the pseudonym "a cup of tea," which things are written without prejudice.

In order to make a reasonably complete this brief account of the cup that cheers, I must add that it contains a small proportion of a volatile oil, which is of small physiological importance, but which contributes largely to the gustatory character of tea. The chief public delusion in this connection is that the sense of taste may be impudently trusted. You think you are not getting your money's worth unless your senses are violently assailed. It is as if you judged the power of music in terms of the amplitude of the sound waves. The master's pianissimo chord has more potency than the sforzando of mediocrity.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Little Vague.
A Boston lady seeking summer board on a farm saw an advertisement giving a description of about such a place as she wanted and sent a letter of inquiry. She received the following information as to terms:
"We charge $5 a week for men, $4.50 for ladies and $4 for children old enough to eat, all ages and sexes to pay more if difficult."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Outside and Inside.
A bath cleanses the skin and rids the pores of refuse. A bath makes for better fellowship and citizenship. Not only should the outside of the body be cleansed, but occasional use of a laxative or cathartic opens the bowels and clears the system of effete matter. Best for this are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Pleasant little pills that do not grip or sicken. Sold by The Arant Co. Drug Store.

True Education.
The first, last and closest trial question to any living creature is, "What do you like?" and the entire object of true education is to make people not merely do the right things, but enjoy the right things.—John Ruskin.

HIS LONG NOSESHIP.

Charles V. and the Merry, Modest Cobbler of Flanders.
Charles V., in his intervals of relaxation, used to retire to Brussels. He was a prince known to know the sentiments of his nearest subjects concerning himself and his administration. Therefore he often went "incovert" and mixed himself in such companies and conversations as he thought proper. One night, his boot requiring immediate mending, he was directed to a cobbler. Unluckily it happened to be St. Crispin's holiday, and instead of finding the cobbler inclined for work he was in the height of his jollity among his acquaintances. The emperor acquainted him with what he wanted and offered a handsome gratuity. "What, friend," says the fellow, "do you know no better than to ask any of our craft to work on St. Crispin's day? Was it Charles V. himself I'd not do a stitch for him now." But if you're in a hurry to drink to St. Crispin, do as welcome. We are as merry as the emperor can be."
The sovereign accepted his offer, but while he was contemplating their rude pleasure, instead of joining in it, the jovial host thus accosted him: "But I suppose you are some courtier, politician or other, by that contemplative phiz. But be who or what you will, you're heartily welcome. Drink about. Here's Charles V.'s health."
"Then you love Charles V.?" replied the emperor.
"Love him," says the son of Crispin. "Ay, ay, I love his long noseship well enough, but I should love him much more would he but tax us a little less. But what have we to do with politics? Round with the glass and merry be our hearts!"
After a short stay the emperor took his leave and thanked the cobbler for his hospitable reception.
"That," cried he, "you're welcome to, but I would not have dishonored St. Crispin to have worked for the emperor."
Charles, pleased with the honest good nature and humor of the fellow, sent for him next morning to court. One may imagine his surprise to see and hear that his late guest was his sovereign. He feared his joke on his long nose would be punished with death. The emperor, however, thanked him for his hospitality and as a reward for it bid him ask for what he most desired and take the whole night to settle his surprise and ambition.
Next day he appeared and requested that for the future the cobbler should be known by the name of "Charles V.," and that his arms be a foot and the emperor's crown upon it. That request was granted, and, so moderate was his ambition, the emperor bid him make another. "If," says he, "I am to have my utmost wishes, command that for the future the Company of Cobblers shall take the place of the Company of Shoemakers." It was accordingly so ordained, and to this day there is to be seen a chapel in Flanders adorned round with a boot and an imperial crown on it, and in all processions the Company of Cobblers takes the place of the Company of Shoemakers.

Perfectly Safe.
Patient—Doctor, I'm horribly afraid of being buried alive. Doctor—Don't worry for an instant, my friend. I'll see to that all right.

The World's an Inn and death the journey's end.—Dryden.

Ladies, read this catalogue of charms.
Bright eyes, glowing cheeks, red lips, a smooth skin without a blemish, in short, everything that comes from the heart, never gets anywhere, even to church, unless accompanied by her parents, some male relative or other equally trusted attendant. At a dance the parents sit round the walls sipping their coffee or wine, and the young men must make the best of their chances in the opportunities afforded by the dance, for when it pleases the guardians to depart there is no help for it, the girls must go too. An unmarried girl always takes the right arm of her escort, while the matron takes the left, perhaps because it is nearer the heart.

Avoiding the Doctor.

Dr. Sanderson, an old Scotch physician, was a queer character, but a clever doctor.
So roughly did he handle his patients that the ignorant were chiefly anxious to escape him. The story goes that he was passing along the street one day a sweep rolled from the top to the bottom of a staircase outside one of the houses.
"Are you hurt?" called the doctor, running forward.
"Not a bit, doctor—not a bit," replied the man in haste. "Indeed, I feel at the better."

The "Longest Resident."
The poverty of the English language is exemplified by a circular which is making the rounds of a suburban and invites subscriptions to a testimonial on the station master.
"I myself," the longest resident of the said physical fact being that he is probably the shortest, although in bulk and rotundity he makes up for the inches he lacks in height. Here is a case in which the very clumsiness of the German language would be an indelible help, for then this gentleman could quite correctly describe himself "the for-the-longest-time-herein residing" or even perhaps "the for-the-longest-time-herein-residingest" individual. Those compound adjectives of the Teutons may be awkward, but they express what the user means and insure accuracy.—London Standard.

The Cigar in Dutch Courtship.

An Amsterdam journal tells how important a part the cigar plays in a Dutch courtship. The young man in love calls casually at the young woman's house with his cigar: out and casually asks for a light. There is a delicate hint, and if he calls again for a light the parents understand what to expect. A family council is held, and the reply is prepared. If on his third call the wooer receives a light, but has the door immediately closed in his face, he understands that he is cold shouldered. If, on the other hand, his suit is welcome, after receiving his light he is invited in, the young woman is presented to him, and he puffs out his declaration through the curls of smoke.

A Taste That Ate Withers.
According to a member of the candy loving sex, there is no sadder evidence of age in a woman than being able to pass a bonbon shop without being tempted by the wares. "When a woman can do this," she says, "she is frankly middle aged. During your school days chocolates are a recognized necessity of existence. During the early bud period of matinee hero worship they are indispensable to the enjoyment of a performance. When your mouth does not water at the mere idea of a caramel or a marshmallow begin to search for the first gray hair."—New York Press.

Rescue of a Merchant.

A prominent merchant of Shogon, N. Y., J. A. Johnson, says: "Several years ago I contracted a cough which grew worse and worse until I was hardly able to move around. I coughed constantly and nothing relieved my terrible suffering until I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. Before I had taken half a bottle my cough was much better. I surely believe it saved my life. It will always be my family remedy for colds." Fully guaranteed; 50c and $1.00. Sold at The Arant Co. Drug Store.
