OH, WHEN?

There is always something croppring out of the speeches of Senator Tillman which gives the newspapers a subject for criticism, and the latest is an old hackeneyed boast that he would lead a mob to lynch for a certain crime. At Birmingham, Ala., he said "With the oath on my lips to uphold the law I would lead a mob any time to lynch a man, black or white, who had ravished a woman.

Senator Tillman has said this many times before, but it has been regarded as a meaningless boast in the heat of debate, but when he refers to the "oath on my lips" it has the sound of deliberation, which to our mind, considering his high position, is not calculated to place him or the State he represents in an enviable position. We doubt seriously that the Senator could be induced to lead a lynching mob, for did he do so it would jeopardize his seat in the United States Senate, and we do not believe he would willingly turn loose that position. He might by his incendiary utterances influence others to disregard the law of the land and take the risk of legal punishment, but his personality would be far from the sonality would be far from the sonality would be far from the disease and giving the patients region by oulding up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. these wild, sensational utterances, they can do lots of harm, and cannot do any good. They do not reflect any credit upon himself, and they bring discredit upon his State. Senator Tillman is in position to be a great help to South Carolina, and now that he has been re.elected, and that too without opposition, he should be more guarded in his on the other hand they pointed to its speeches and make a reputation efficacy. for sound statesmanship.

> Turks and Meerschaum According to the best authorities upon the subject, the idea of using white talc in the manufacture of pipes is of comparatively recent date compared with the age of the habit of smoking, and what is still more curious is the fact that in the oriental countries which produce white tale, or meerschaum, as it is called, and where the use of tobacco forms part of the education of the faithful the people never dream of making this substance into pipes. They make bowls and goblets of it, but no pipes. It may be that the long pipestems which allow the smoke to cool and lose its acridity before reaching the mouth leave the oriental smoker quite indifferent in regard to the quality of the bowl. At all events, one never sees a Turk with a meerschaum pipe.

> Enormous Lifting Power. The shelless limpet pulls 1,984 times its own weight when in the air and about double when measured in the water. Fleas pull 1,493 times their own dead weight. The Mediterranean cockle, Venus verrucosa, can exert a pulling power equal to 2,071 times the weight of its own body. So great is the power possessed by the oyster that to open it a force equal to 1,319.5 times the weight of its shelless body is required. If the human being possessed strength as great in proportion as that of these shellfish the average man would be able to lift the enormous weight of 2,976,000 pounds, pulling in the same degree as the limpet. And if the man pulled in the same proportionate degree as the cockle he would sustain a weight of no less than 3,106,-500 pounds.
