Belknap went to he war of the rebellion as the major become a regular meal until quite lately, and Dr. Murray in the Oxford Dictionary gave 1403 as the date of the earliest quotation in which the word occurred. The meal did not become recognized until late in the seventeenth century, for Pepys habitually took his draft of half a pint of Rhenish wine or a dram of strong waters in place of a morning meal. Dinner was always the great meal of the day, and from the accession of Henry IV. to the death of Queen Elizabeth the dinners were as sumptuous and extravagant as any of those now served.

Carving was then a fine art. Each guest brought his own knife and spoon, for the small fork was not introduced into England until Thomas Coryate of Odcombe published his "Crudities" in 1611. Pepys took his spoon and fork with him to the lord mayor's feast in much stress being laid upon the act of task of editorial and clerical work, washing the hands both before and after meals and to the rule that the left hand alone should be dipped into the common dish, the right hand being occupied with the knife.

The perfect dinner at the best time of English cookery consisted of three courses, each complete in itself, and terminated by a subtlety or device, the whole being rounded off with ypocras, after which the guests retired into another room, where pastry, sweetments and fruit were served with the choicer wines. The English were essentially meat eaters, and it was not until the time of the commonwealth that pudding attained its extraordinary popularity. Indeed, the first mention of pudding in the menus of the Buckfeast at St. Bartholomew's hospital did not occur until 1710, and in 1712 is an item of 5 shillings for ice .-- London Times.

MAKING A DICTIONARY.

The Colossal Task of Selecting the Words to Be Used. One of the men who compiled a big dictionary talks as follows about the way the work was done: From the largest dictionary of the language all the words were diligently copied, and then each of the smaller dictionaries was checked off in turn against this growing list. When the dictionaries had been thus exhausted all the living authors of works that had an undoubted standard value were secured to contribute from their works such words as they had used that were 2

In addition to this, the services of about 500 readers were utilized, among whom was distributed all the standard literature from Chaucer to the present time. These readers were instructed to report such words as seemed to be new and not found in the ordinary dictionaries and to locate them by page and line that they might be inspec ed. each in its own context. For this purpose pre ared blanks were furnished. Specialists in various trades, arts and professions were also invited to send such words belonging to the technique of their vocabularies as might be familiar to them, but which were not in general use, and so had not found their way into the dictionaries. It will be seen that the collection of a vocabulary on such a plan, though there were many helpers, was a long and laborious task, involving a great amount of correspondence, which extended literally all over the world. 1663. The absence of forks led to Added to this was the nearly appalling merely to sift and organize these contributions. It is not to be imagined that words so gathered could or should be all included. An organized staff of editors and philologists was required, who passed upon the eligibility of each word. The conservative care exercised in determining the scope and limits of a vocabulary can be inferred from the fact that in one of these offices, after a "dragnet" had gathered over 500,000 words, more than 200,000 were finally rejected. These included words that were still too completely foreign to merit a place in an English vocabulary, all the "used but once" words, considerable slang language and many technical terms that had good reasons against them. The fixing of a date before which words should be excluded, except on certain conditions, resulted in throwing out many.

When words have been selected for a dictionary, several distinct things must be done with them. They must be divided into their proper syllables, and the right syllables must be supplied with accents. They must be pronounced by the use of certain arbitrary signs used in a respelling of them to indicate the powers of the letters they contain. They must be defined in all the senses in which they have actually been found used in literature. In the case of a primary form the origin of the word in other languages-that is, its etymology-must be given.-Chicago drawn."-New York Press.

It is related of Frederick II., king of Prussia, that he one day made a present of a golden snuffbox to one of his counts. When the latter opened the lid he found the picture of an ass painted upon the underside of it. Though he scarcely relished the king's joke, he said nothing at the time, but as soon as he quitted the king's presence he sent one of his valets with the snuffbox to the city and gave him instructions that the picture of the ass was to be painted out and a portrait of the king put in its place. A few days later a distinguished company dined with the king. The count was one of the guests, and after a time he produced his snuffbox and pretended to examine it with the air of a man who was proud to have received such a gift from the king. The latter, wishing to enjoy a little amusement at the count's expense, mentioned to the Duchess of Brunswick that he had made a present of the box to the count on the preceding day. She desired to inspect it, and when the box was handed to her she opened the lid and, looking inside, cried in raptures: "Perfect! The likeness is charming! It is one of the best portraits of you that I have ever seen!" She handed the box to the person next to her, who was equally charmed with the likeness. From one to another the box was passed, and all testified to the excellent resemblance which the picture bore to the king. The king, thinking that the ass' head was still to be seen on the snuffbox, felt exceedingly embarrassed and scarcely knew what to make of the incident, but at last the snuffbox, having made the tour of the table, came to his hands. and the first glance showed him how cleverly the count had anticipated his Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in it self, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it'strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these herves—re-establish them as needed, with
