SUPERVISOR McFADDIN PUTS IT UP TO EDITOR NETTLES.

The publication in the Southern Christian Advocate November 12th, relating to the election held in Clarendon on the liquor question, and in which it is stated that Supervisor McFaddin "admitted that a high official influenced him not to publish the notice," has aroused the indignation of Mr. McFaddin, and he feels that a grave injury has been done him.

Immediately upon having his attention called to the editorial in The Southern Christian Advocate, he addressed a letter to its editor demanding the authority for the assertion that he "admitted that a high official influenced him not to publish the notice."

Upon receipt of the above letter, Mr. McFaddin communicated with Rev. D. A. Phillips and Mr. Joseph Sprott, and both deny telling Mr. Nettles, Mr. McFaddin "admitted that a high official influenced him not to publish the notice."

Manning, S. C., Nov. 23, 1908. Mr. R. E. McFaddin, Supervisor, Manning, S. C. Dear Sir: In answer to yours of the 21st inst., as to reference to me by the editor of The Southern Christian Advocate concerning certain alleged admissions by you, I beg to say that the Editor of The Advocate, Rev. S. A. Nettles, is certainly mistaken if he claims that I gave him any such information.

Manning, S. C., Nov. 21, 1908. Mr. R. E. McFaddin, Supervisor, Manning, S. C. Dear Sir: I have just received your letter of even date herewith which states, "In copy of Southern Christian Advocate of the 12th inst., under the heading 'Prohibition Success,' it was charged that the Supervisor of Clarendon County admitted that through the influence of a prominent office holder he did not order special election, etc., etc."

It will thus be seen that somebody has gravely blundered, and the statement that Supervisor McFaddin "admitted that a high official influenced him not to publish the notice" did not emanate from the source the editor of the Southern Christian Advocate gave as the reference who would substantiate the charge made by him.

THEY NEED AID. It will be a great help to the Clarendon delegation for the county board of commissioners to furnish a full and complete statement of the county's financial condition for publication, so the public may know exactly how things are, and just how much more the taxes, if any, will have to be raised to meet the demands upon the county.

It is suggested by some to do away with the chain gang as a means of reducing expenses, but the same people who make this suggestion also say that the people have become so accustomed to pay the commutation tax that it will be impossible to get them to work the roads. Never since the days of reconstruction has there been such a problem to solve and with so little encouragement to solve it.

We take it there is not a member of the delegation who wants to raise the tax levy, at the same time, none of them would be willing to have a chaotic condition. It is impossible to have roads and bridges in travelling condition without money, and if the present levy will not raise enough to meet the demands, why a higher levy must be imposed.

There are a number of men who are good at criticizing those who try to do something for the public good, who may render the public a better service if they will devise a way and means which will add the delegation in solving the bad problem which confronts it.

KEEP CHURCH AND STATE SEPARATE.

The northern Methodist church as such, went into politics good and strong in the recent election for the purpose of defeating "Uncle Joe Cannon," but the old political war horse was too much for the clergy-politicians, and the old fellow was re-elected by an increased majority.

The rebuke the Northern Methodist Church received in the recent campaign should serve as an object lesson to prove that Americans will not submit to church domination in political affairs.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and the last few years have supposed to be incurable. For great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed diuretics, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable.

The Columbia State objects to a newspaper or a public man having independent political views, that in order to be a Democrat according to The State's standard, there must be a submission and strict obedience to the party mandates.

Judge Klugh's sentence of W. A. Thompson was so severe that we are inclined to believe His Honor permitted his prejudices to override his sense of justice. The idea of imposing a fine of $1500 or 18 months in the penitentiary for violating the dispensary law. Why not impose a life sentence? Is the selling of whiskey a heinous offense? We think not.

It is suggested by some to do away with the chain gang as a means of reducing expenses, but the same people who make this suggestion also say that the people have become so accustomed to pay the commutation tax that it will be impossible to get them

Pinewood Dots. The members of Pinewood Lodge No. 124 Knights of Pythias have already started arrangements for their oyster supper to take place at their next regular meeting, which will be the first Wednesday night in December, which falls on the second.

The town election was pulled off on the 17th with the following result: D. R. Lide, attendant; Messrs. J. W. Weeks, E. C. Giddings, B. D. Griffin and W. D. Epperson, wardens. Mr. Frank Griffin had one of his thumbs mashed off one day last week, while on a hand car crossing Santee street.

Miss Decca Eli Lawrence and Mr. Albert Ross Williamson of Augusta, Ga. will be married on Wednesday evening, November 25, at 4 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lawrence, parents of the bride.

It is a little dangerous to citizens to linger on Hampton Avenue at night for "bullets" are going too and fro, almost nightly. Mrs. C. C. Chapman and Miss Abbie Bazin have returned home after an extended visit to Cheraw, S. C.

Contractor Grandy is pushing the completion of the school house rapidly. He has a contract to do some repairing at Millford as the Northern visitors are expected about December 15th.

John Nelson killed Daisy Clark on last Thursday night near what is known as Manning Pineland Section. Nelson started into the house where the Clark woman was, with a gun on his shoulder. As he entered the door he attempted to take the gun from off his shoulder and for some unknown reason the gun was discharged and the bullet entered the woman's right side, death being almost instant.

Free License.

The dye has been cast by the voting out of the dispensary and the flood-gates to free whiskey has been now opened in Clarendon county.

Yes, Prohibition is said now to prevail in Clarendon and our word for it, it will prevail only in name but never in fact. The dispensary plan by which intoxicating liquors have been sold in South Carolina for the past fifteen years and more, has we believe been the best plan ever devised by mortal man.

There are laws on the statute books of South Carolina, if properly and impartially enforced will call any man down that so far forgets to keep himself within the bounds of decency and respectability while in the indulgence of intoxicants.

Before the waxing and waning of many moons many thirsty whiskey drinking prohibitionists will be repenting in sackcloth and ashes for being such fools in voting out the dispensary, and will put up many lamentations for only a "wee drop."

Dispenser Williams says that he has noticed already an increase in the patronage from Clarendon county. The mail order whiskey houses and the express company will also be cognizant that Clarendon has voted out the dispensary and is nominally prohibition territory.

It is suggested by some to do away with the chain gang as a means of reducing expenses, but the same people who make this suggestion also say that the people have become so accustomed to pay the commutation tax that it will be impossible to get them

Hanging to a narrow ledge of the wall of Wheat Canyon, with a drop of more than a hundred feet below him, Louis Leamon, 59 years old of Los Angeles, was rescued from certain death by Chief J. C. Shill of the Hollywood fire department, says the Los Angeles Dispatch.

Leamon was exhausted when the rescuer reached him. His hands were torn and bleeding. To hold to his perilous perch he had dug his fingers into the scale of rock, and the nails had been broken in to the flesh. His arms, neck and face were purpled from the terrible strain which he had been compelled to undergo to keep from pitching headlong to the rocks of the canyon bed, far below.

Leamon had left early in the morning for a day's dove shooting. He shot a dove and it fell into the soft earth of the wall, a few feet below the ridge, and Leamon started after it. He reached the dove and started to crawl back to the top, when the ground began to slide away, and he was carried down twenty-five feet before he gained a footing.

Chief Shill was notified and hurried to the place with an automobile truck. Ladders were placed against the cliff, but Leamon was afraid to let go his hold. Chief Shill then, by a round-about path, reached the ridge of the canyon. He tied a heavy rope to a tree and lowered himself over the ridge to where the exhausted man hung. Tying another rope about Leamon's body, Shill lifted him to the ladder and lowered him gently. It was more than an hour before Leamon had sufficiently recovered to board a car for his home.

One of the finest old Scottish residences is Scone Palace, near Perth, the ancient centre of the Pictish capital, former crowning place of the Kings of Scotland, and now the residence of the Earl of Mansfield, representative of the ancient family of Stormont, says the Queen.

The great gallery at Scone, which is 100 feet long, occupies the place of the old hall where kings were crowned in days of yore, the coronation of Charles II having taken place there in 1651 and that of the Chevalier St. George in "the Fifteen."

Even of later years Scone has been honored by the visits of royalty, her late Majesty Queen Victoria having paid quite a long visit at the palace in 1842, the occasion of her first visit to Perth, and again after the death of the prince consort.
