Light as the Ford Car is, 1200 lbs., it is no lighter in proportion than a passenger engine of the accepted highest type. The 5000 H. P. Pacific type locomotive used on the Pennsylvania Lines West weighs 53.5 lbs. per horse power. The Model "J" weighs 53.3 lbs. per horse power. Each is designed by an engineering expert for passenger service. On the other hand, the average freight engine, as well as a large proportion of automobiles, weighs from 85 to 110 lbs. per horse power. Note the difference?

We are also agents for the mighty Reo. Car load Automobile, expected this week. Ask for a demonstration.

Colic of Horses and Mules.

Clemson Extension Work.—Article XIV.

One of the most common and alarming diseases occurring in horses and mules is that of colic. The term is a very loose one, being generally used to denote any abdominal pain whatever, and it may readily be inferred that it therefore occurs in a great variety of diseases. It is however only necessary here to consider it under its head, viz. spasmodic colic and colic due to impaction or obstruction of the bowels.

Spasmodic colic is probably the most frequent occurrence and consists of a violent contraction of the muscles of the intestines, causing intense pain. It is usually brought on by giving large amounts of cold water to a horse over-heated; by exposing such a horse to chilling rains after a hard drive; sometimes by giving a heavy feed of green succulent feed; and in horses that are predisposed to it, a sudden change of diet may be all that is necessary to bring on an attack.

The condition is recognized by the horse suddenly showing symptoms of intense pain for a few moments. The causes above mentioned, stamping violently with one hind foot; looking around at the flanks with an anxious expression; sweating; lying down suddenly and rolling in agony, and with occasional periods of freedom from pain followed by singular attacks.

Colic from impaction, as the name indicates, is a condition in which there is a partial or complete stoppage of the bowels, and may be brought on by overloading the stomach when in a tired condition, or particularly with dry, innutritious feed. A faulty condition of the teeth may also be a predisposing feature on account of imperfect mastication of the food. This condition is accompanied by constipation and the animal shows evidences of a continuous dull pain as compared with that of spasmodic colic, moving stiffly, lying down occasionally and groaning due to absence of violent movement. It is usually a longer course usually than spasmodic colic.

While it is always advisable to consult a qualified veterinarian when possible, this is frequently impracticable on account of the small number of veterinarians in this State, and every horse owner ought to have some intelligent idea as to how to recognize and treat the condition.

In spasmodic colic it is evident that a sedative or narcotic treatment should be resorted to in order to overcome the violent contraction and relieve the pain. One of the best remedies is fluid extract of Cannabis indica, or Indian hemp given in doses of six drams by the month. This brings on drowsiness and in a few minutes the colic has disappeared. Another good remedy is chloral hydrate given in doses of one ounce dissolved in a pint of water, or if a hypodermic syringe is available, two grains of morphine may be dissolved in a little water that has been boiled and allowed to cool and injected under the skin.

With impaction colic, entirely different remedies are needed, the object being to unload the intestines of the offending material. For this purpose five drams of aloes dissolved in a quart of hot water and combined with one ounce of oil of turpentine and one dram of fluid extract of cayenne may be given or if this is not conveniently at hand, one and a half pints of linseed oil may be given, and if there is evidence of much pain three drams of Cannabis indica may also be given. Copious rectal injections of soap suds are beneficial also. These remedies will usually suffice, but if more drastic treatment is necessary it should be entrusted to a veterinarian.

Much can be done in the way of preventing and by preference in the causes mentioned the methods of prevention will suggest themselves.

Obstructing the Law.

In a murder case recently before the New York Court of Appeals, the judge was asked to order a new trial, even though the prisoner's guilt was well established, because "the indictment did not specify the defendant was a human being." Cases similar, and often less well founded, have hampered the administration of justice for years, and of late the excessive delays litigants are put to, and the severe cost for retrials, have driven the public into an attitude of suspicion for all the processes and formalities of the law. Criminal practice has been made to appear a device for the prevention of truth telling rather than in aid of it. Most of these ingenious technicalities, with the policy of frustration, grew into vogue largely in that English era, when criminal punishments were so severe as to shock lawyers, public and jury into a partisanship for the prisoner, into wishing him every available advantage. There were at least 200 capital offences then, and the theft of a shilling handkerchief was punishable by hanging. But conditions have changed much since, with the result that the course of justice is badly hampered. The higher courts begin to show a tendency to frown upon such shallow technicalities as are constantly introduced in the path of justice. The time when justice need deceive its own servants has passed away. And for the best interests of public sentiment and conduct, for the good of individual justice, judges must stop this transparent quibbling over the letter of the law.—Boston Herald.

A Custom of the Balkans.

He or she who enters a house for the first time is supposed in the Balkan countries to bring it good or bad luck for the whole twelvemonth. This belief gives rise to a curious observance. The visitor before crossing the threshold picks up a stone (token of strength) or a green twig (emblem of health and fruitfulness) and lays it on the hearth. He also brings with him some grains of salt, which he casts into the flames, and then, squatting by the fireside, wishes his hosts "a prosperous year, a plentiful crop and many blessings." Then as the grains of salt burst and crackle in the fire he utters the following quaint formula: "As I am sitting, even so may sit the hen and warm the eggs. As this salt splits, even so may split the eggs of the clucking hen and the chickens come forth."

Reptiles' Eggs.

Reptiles' eggs are not very attractive objects. In the case of crocodiles and many kinds of tortoises they are pale colored or white and resemble those of birds in shape. But the egg of the gopher tortoise is remarkable for its complete roundness. It might well be mistaken for a golf ball. Many snakes' eggs are soft skinned, brown as to color and look for all the world like a number of new potatoes.—Scientific American.

ATLANTIC OCEAN RESORTS

Evidence of the Growing Importance of North Carolina's Popular Resorts, Wrightsville and Carolina Beaches—Approaching Season Will be Big One.

The rapidly approaching season will undoubtedly result in the history of Wrightsville and Carolina Beaches, the delightful summer resorts in close proximity to Wilmington. Practically every organization of importance will meet at Wilmington and Wrightsville between June 1st and September 1st, among which are the United Commercial Travelers of the Carolinas, the North Carolina Press Association, North Carolina Good Roads Association, State Medical Society, State Dental Society, the Association of the Bankers' Association, State Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., the North Carolina Architects, and probably others. Nearly all of these organizations will take a side trip down the Cape Fear river with probably a stop at Carolina Beach, as no trip to Wilmington is complete without a trip on the steamer Wilmington.

One of the most important of the many improvements at Wrightsville Beach is the enlargement of Tarrymore Hotel, Mr. W. J. Moore, manager, the excellent hotel having added another wing to the north of the old part, in which 30 new and appointed rooms and equipped with all the conveniences of a modern hotel. The addition extends out toward the ocean and is so arranged that every room commands a view of the ocean. The extension is built on concrete piers, and is connected with the old part of the hotel by spacious verandas. The new wing is a masterpiece of the extensive improvements at the Seashore Hotel, Mr. Edgar L. Hinton, manager. A steel pier has been constructed from the rear entrance of the hotel to extend 700 feet out into the ocean. The pier is 30 feet wide the greater part of its length and out at the end is 50 feet wide. At the end of the pier a building of two-story building will be used for concerts, dances and other forms of amusement. The roof of the building will be used as observation veranda, from which the view of the beach can be had. The pier is really a continuation of the hotel veranda. The pier will be greatly patronized by fish parties as well as for the different forms of amusement mentioned above. Besides the pier, the Seashore has enlarged its capacity by the addition of 80 rooms, in a wing extending from the rear of the hotel along the ocean front. With this addition the Seashore Hotel now has 250 well equipped rooms.

Lumina, North Carolina's pleasure palace, has also been improved, or rather the approach to the amusement resort has been greatly improved and beautified by the removal of the old pier, the new Lumina standing conspicuously out in an open, clear space. Additions have been built to nearly all of the high-class boarding houses to twenty rooms each. Down at Carolina Beach, where so many Wilmingtonians and out-of-town visitors like to sojourn, a number of improvements have been made and visitors this season will find the resort even more attractive than ever and a trip on the steamer Wilmington is one that should not be missed. The same stop at the beach and others will go on to Southport, from whence they will take the delightful trip out to sea.

An Odd Nugget of Gold.

There have been many large and oddly shaped gold nuggets found in the United States and elsewhere, but the oddest of them all was that discovered at the Midhas mine, on Sulky gully, near Melbourne, Australia, in 1887. The nugget was flat and almost the exact counterpart in contour of a colossal human hand held open, with the exception of the thumb and forefinger, which were closed together in a manner so as to make it appear that the thumb was holding the finger in place. Its greatest length was twelve and a half inches and its greatest breadth eight inches. It was of a very purest gold, with but a little of foreign substance adhering, mostly between the "fingers," and weighed 675 ounces. It was found in the north-west main drive of the Midhas mine, 120 feet below the surface of the earth and at a spot only fifty feet from where the famous Lady Brassey nugget was discovered the year before. It weighed fifty-one pounds of pure gold.

Party's Fate on One Vote.

Instances are common enough in elections when a single vote turns the scale, but for that vote to decide not only the fate of a candidate, but of a party as well, is rare. Yet a majority of one in parliament, which may logically depend on a majority of one in the country, has worked some of the most momentous results possible. The classical example is the act of union of 1790, certainly among the largest, most important and most remarkable changes ever accomplished by a legislative body. One hundred and six voted for it and 103 against. Then a majority of one carried the great reform bill in 1832. Majorities only a little bigger have again and again been responsible for far-reaching consequences. A majority of five threw out the Melbourne government in 1839. By the same figure Lord John Russell's government was defeated in 1836. Gladstone went out of office in 1873 because he lacked three votes, and the public education act, one of the most important ever passed, was placed on the statute book by a majority of two.—London Chronicle.

The Sunny Side of Superstition.

That there is anything genial, cheering or therapeutically valuable about superstition may seem a tall statement. The adjective generally associated with it is "dark." On the contrary, there is something very brightening about a four leaf clover. Who is not a little more of an optimist for picking up a horseshoe? What lonely farmer's wife, stormbound on a winter afternoon, with unwelcome leisure on her hands, but feels a little quickening of the pulse as she drops her scissors and beholds them sticking up in the carpet or discovers that she has laid an extra place at the table? Company signs are all of superstitions, and welcomed of all superstitious. The needle, the dishcloth, the fork, the Saturday sneeze, all inculcate hospitality and reward it by an unexpected visitor. If the needle slants as it stands up in the crack of the door it foretells a gentleman. Run, young daughters of the house, and put a blue bow in your hair!—Atlantic Monthly.

A Dutcher Fishing Fleet.

If the trawler wants to get a real glimpse of picturesque Holland, a glimpse which shall long be a happy memory, let him journey to the old fishing village of Scheveningen, not far from The Hague. Its fishing fleet is an imposing one and is best seen at night, when the boats are drawn up on the beach. Each has a number, and these are painted on the sides in such large figures that they can be read at a considerable distance. At night when the fishermen begin to come to land the women of the village walk down to the beach with their knitting in their hands to meet them. They wear their wooden shoes, some of which are made to look especially clean by an application of white, and they make a merry chatter as they go. Industry is characteristic of the women of Holland in all walks of life. They must always be at work of some kind, and it would seem as if work knitting needles must be used in Holland than in any other country in the world.—E. J. Farrington in Interior

Balzac and Black Coffee.

Balzac was addicted to the use of strong black coffee and depended upon it as a nervous stimulant during the hours which he devoted to composition. Its effect he has himself described in these words:—"The coffee falls into your stomach. Immediately everything starts into action. Your ideas begin to move like Grand Army battalions on the battle field, and the battle commences. Memories arrive at a run, standards flying; the light cavalry of comparisons breaks into a magnificent gallop; the artillery of logic dashes up and unlimbers; thoughts come rushing up as sharpshooters; characters spring up on all sides; the paper becomes covered with ink, for the struggle has begun and ends in torrents of black water like the battle in black powder."

Burns as a Tax Collector.

In the olden days candles were taxed articles, and it was the duty of Robert Burns as an excise officer to see that the tax was not evaded. He generally looked the other way, however, as when passing through the kitchen one night at William Lorimer's of Kennishall, where the lodger was busy making candles, he merely remarked, "Faith, madam, ye're thrang the night," and passed into the parlor.—St. James' Gazette.

The Mountains Bother Them.

The British have had heaps of trouble in Siam to make the natives understand that the world is round, instead of flat. Indeed, the native teachers keep on teaching the children that it is flat, and when argued with they reply, "If it isn't flat why do the mountains stand up as they do instead of rolling downhill?"

Candidates' Cards.

TO THE VOTERS OF CLARENDON AND the 1st Congressional District: I announce myself a candidate for Congress from the First Congressional District and solicit your votes and support. Clarendon County has never furnished a representative in Congress during the fifty-five years of the County's history. If Clarendon ever wants a congressman I believe now is her opportune time. If my friends will stand by me in this county and do what they can for me in the other counties of Berkeley, Johnston, Colleton and Darlington, I believe there is a chance of this County furnishing a man to look after the District, in the Washington. J. H. LESSNER.

To My Friends and Constituents of the 1st Congressional District.

I hereby announce that I shall stand for reelection to Congress, subject to the rules governing the Democratic primary. During the years I have been your Congressman I have done my best to serve you honestly and faithfully and to protect your every interest to the best of my ability. I trust you will have confidence in my ability to serve you, and I shall esteem and appreciate very highly any assistance you may render me in the coming primary. GEO. S. LEGARE.

Governor.

I HEREBY TO ANNOUNCE MY CANDIDACY for the office of Governor, subject to the decision of the Democratic voters of the State. Campaign promises are easily made. My purpose is to be elected, to give the people a plain, honest, and business-like administration. Of course I shall advocate good roads, good schools and good government, and will ask the voters to stand by me in the coming primary. I am, as usual, a consistent advocate of prohibition and was among the first to give money and lend influence to push this movement more than twenty years ago. As a business man my chief aim if elected, will be to conduct a State. F. H. HYATT.

Senate.

I HEREBY ANNOUNCE MYSELF A CANDIDATE for the Senate, subject to the rules of the Democratic primary. W. C. DAVIS.

House of Representatives.

I HEREBY ANNOUNCE MYSELF A CANDIDATE for the House of Representatives, subject to the rules and requirements of the Democratic primary. R. D. WHITE.
