FORCE OF GRAVITY.
 How It Would Affect Man's Weight on the Celestial Bodies.
 If the planet Mars were really inhabited the people who live there must be an exceedingly agile race. The average weight of a man is about 140 pounds, but the force of gravity on Mars is so much less than on the earth that the 140 pound man would weigh only fifty-three pounds if he were transported thither. With such light weight, and still retaining the same strength, an individual would be able to run with the speed of an express train, go skipping over ten foot walls and do various other extraordinary things. On the moon a man would be even lighter.
 But on the sun our 140 pounder would have his troubles. Instead of being an airy individual, his weight would be increased to a ton and three-quarters. He would probably have the greatest difficulty in raising his hand, for that member would weigh about 300 pounds. According to scientific computation, a man who on earth weighs 140 pounds would on the other celestial bodies weigh as follows:
 The moon, 23 pounds; Mars, 53 pounds; Venus, 114 pounds; Mercury, 119 pounds; Neptune, 123 pounds; Uranus, 127 pounds; Saturn, 105 pounds; Jupiter, 371 pounds, and the sun, 3,571 pounds.—Chicago Tribune.

A SAD STORY.
 The Misfortune That Came With a Terrible Tumble.
 Fowling is now very little practiced in the Shetland islands, although many eggs are secured annually. Many thrilling stories of fowling adventures are told by the Shetlanders. A man who had undertaken to climb a certain steep cliff was never very experienced nor very brave, although he boasted of being both. He pushed upward, however, briskly without looking behind until he had got up about 150 feet, when he stopped to breathe. The pause was fatal to his self-possession, and he called out in tones of terror, "Men, men, I am going—I am going." But he still held on for a little, and it was not till he had shrieked many times "I am going" that he did fall headlong.
 His comrades, having thus been warned, moved the boat out of the way so that the poor fellow came sheer down into the deep water. Mighty was the plunge, but at length he rose to the surface, when of course he was instantly caught hold of and dragged into the boat. After many gasps and much spluttering of sea water from his mouth his only remark was: "Eh, men, this is a sad story. I have lost my snuffbox."—Sketches and Tales of Shetland.

The Last Ditch.
 When William, prince of Orange, afterward William III. of England, was elected stadtholder of the United Netherlands in 1672 and found himself in the midst of war with England and France he was asked by the Duke of Buckingham whether he did not see ruin impending over his country.
 "Yes," he answered. "There is one certain means by which I can be sure enough to see my country's ruin. I will die in the last ditch." And, rejecting all terms of peace, he checked the invasion of France by opening sluices and flooding every tract of land, drove them from Holland in 1674 and made honorable terms with England and finally after varying effort brought the war to a successful close by a treaty with France in 1678.

Taken at His Word.
 The doctor was telling how he came to lose one of his best paying patients. The man was a hypochondriac, who was always imagining that something terrible was about to happen to him, and the doctor, who was a great jollier, was kept busy trying to reason him out of his morbid condition.
 "You have worried yourself until you are bordering on a nervous collapse," said the doctor to him one day. "You shouldn't think about your symptoms all the time, but just attend to your affairs as if there was nothing the matter with you."
 "All right, doctor," replied the patient. "I'll do as you say. You needn't come to see me any more."—New York Times.

And He Wasn't.
 "Victoria," said her husband, "you will not mind it, I presume, if I should happen to be detained downtown late this evening?"
 "I shall not mind it," austere answered Mrs. Vick-Senn, "because you will not be detained downtown late this evening or any other evening."—Chicago Tribune.

RATTLESNAKE BITES.
 Simple Rules For Treatment if You Have the Nerve to Use Them.
 The treatment of a rattlesnake wound resolves itself into the application of a few very simple rules. In the first place, a person wounded by a snake usually does the very thing he should not do—that is, goes tearing off at top speed for the nearest human habitation thereby increasing the circulation and disseminating the virus through the system more rapidly. The man should sit calmly down and bind his handkerchief around the limb if it is a limb, break off a stout twig and insert beneath the handkerchief, producing a rude tourniquet, and twist until the circulation is effectually shut off.
 With a sharp knife make an X in the skin over the wound, taking care to penetrate deeper than the fangs have done. If he has good teeth and is snaker in his mouth, he may now stick vigorously upon the wound. It does no good to suck the original wound. It is quite difficult to get any virus back through an opening not greater in caliber than a fine needle.
 If all this is done without delay the chances are that the patient will suffer no greater inconvenience from his experience. If he chances to have handy a stick of silver nitrate he can cauterize the wound thoroughly. Failing that, a brand from the fire will serve. After a time he may release his tourniquet somewhat and permit a portion of the retained blood to enter the circulation. The system is capable of taking care of a great deal of poison if it is allowed to flow into the blood gradually.—Outing.

SET HIM THINKING.
 The Reason His Wife Gave For Disliking Postponements.
 Just when Mrs. Ackroyd had finished packing her trunks and after William Ackroyd had bought railway tickets for her and their two daughters little Bessie came down with a severe case of whooping cough. The doctor positively refused to let the child start on a long journey, and even if he had thought it safe for the little one to leave home he assured Mrs. Ackroyd that she would not be permitted to take the patient into a hotel anywhere.
 "Isn't it a shame?" the distressed lady wailed. "Here we are with everything in our trunks, and my husband has even bought our berths in the sleeper."
 "It is unfortunate, but I don't know what you can do except sit down and wait four or five days. It may be safe then for you to start away."
 When her husband got home that evening Mrs. Ackroyd was weeping.
 "Don't take it so hard, dear," he said. "It might be a good deal worse. Our little one is likely to get along all right. The doctor says the case isn't an unusually severe one, and when I telephoned him this afternoon he said he thought it might be safe for you to start away by the end of the week."
 "I know. He told me the same thing. But I feel that we'll never go. I never postponed anything yet that didn't turn out sadly. I once postponed a wedding, and the marriage never took place."
 Half an hour later William Ackroyd was still sitting in a corner alone thinking it over.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Couldn't Think of It.
 The handsome young plumber laid aside a piece of lead pipe and, approaching the beautiful kitchen maid, said:
 "You look awfully good to me."
 "Go on; quit your kiddin'," she replied.
 "But I mean what I say."
 "I don't got any time to listen to you now. Can't you see I'm busy?"
 "Yes, but what's the use workin' when a fellow wants to make love to you? Say, if I make this job last so I can come back tomorrow will you give your work out of the way so we can talk things over? You're the prettiest girl I ever seen."
 "If you think you can make a fool of me by such silly talk you're mistaken."
 "But I mean every word I say. I want you to try to learn to love me."
 "If you want to make love to me come around this evening. I'll be here."
 "What! On my own time? What kind of a chump do you think I am?"
 —Chicago Record-Herald.

Pricked His Own Bubble.
 This story, found in Rev. Dr. Henry H. Jessup's book, "Fifty-three Years in Syria," seems to indicate that religious vagaries are as short lived in the east as elsewhere. A friend of Dr. Jessup, visiting Jerusalem, met a queer looking solitary stranger pacing the streets of the city, accosted him, and after the usual greetings remarked:
 "You are an American, I infer."
 "Yes, I am," replied the queer looking man.
 "And what are you doing here, if I may ask?"
 "Ah, yes, I'm glad you asked. You see, I've come to preach the new doctrine, that there is to be no more death. If men will only accept it, we'll abolish death, and there'll be no more dying, nor graves, nor coffins, nor funerals. We shall just live right on."
 "But," said Dr. Jessup's friend, "supposing you should sicken and die, what then?"
 "Oh," said the man, "that would bust the whole thing."
 And it did. The poor delirious apostle died a few months later, and with him his "new doctrine."

Difficult to Shoot.
 Birds That Test the Skill of the Best Marksmen.
 We often hear the question as to which is the most difficult bird in the world to shoot. The answer is usually given in favor of the pheasant descending with closed wings from a higher level of flight, though a few give the preference to the second barrel shot at level sentry by the discharge of a first barrel and darting upward and in any direction but that which is expected.
 A bird which we have never seen mentioned and which yet might take a high place in the category is the sand grouse. It is not to be rated as an English bird of sport, but is familiar to shooters in the east, where it is shot as it comes fighting to water holes to drink. Its flight is something like that of a pigeon, with very swift curves and undulations, and in its case again, as in that of the Virginian mosquito hawk, it is said that those who have acquired the knack can kill it with a comparative certainty which is the despair of the novice.
 After all perhaps our pheasant acrobatic downward must still be given the highest marks for difficulty, for we hear of no one who presumes to say he has discovered an infallible knock by which this most perplexing and yet apparently simple shot can be brought off with any great assurance.—Country Life.

LORDLY FORMALITIES.
 Preparing a New Peer For His Seat in House of Lords.
 Numerous formalities have to be gone through before any new peer is entitled to take his seat in the house of lords.
 One of the most important matters is the preparation of the patent, a long strip of parchment to the end of which is affixed the wax seal, the color of which varies, according to the rank of the new member. Another item is the robe, made of scarlet cloth with three doublings of ermine, the number of bars varying according to rank. Thus a duke has four bars in front and the same number behind, a marquess one less, and so on.
 Then there are preparations in regard to making or changing coats of arms, in connection with fees to the extent of about 50 guineas are paid by the recipient of a summons to the house of lords.
 Altogether the financial disbursements amount in the case of a new earl to between 5000 and 4700, some of which finds its way to the chancellor of the exchequer and some to the crown as represented by the college of arms. A considerable portion of this expenditure is, of course, incurred in the purchase of the coronet.—London News.

A Left Handed Man.
 "I never realized how unpopular a left handed man can be until I joined a fishing club," said the man who cannot do much with his right hand. "So-called I was all right, but when we fellows couldn't get far enough away from me. There was another left handed man in the party, and we were shunted upstream, away beyond the best fishing holes. I am a good fisherman, as skillfully as the next man, but when I go fishing with my left hand handed fisherman our lines tangle and we get into a regular muddle. I have tried to learn to manage my pole with my right hand, but I haven't made much headway at it; also I have noticed that right handed persons could learn to do everything with their left hand better than to fish."—New York Times.

The Antiquity of the Ballet.
 Strictly defined, the ballet is properly a theatrical exhibition of the art of dancing in its highest perfection, complying generally with the rules of the drama as to its composition and form. It was in existence in Italy as far back as A. D. 1500, the court of Turin in that day making special use of it and the royal family and nobles taking part in it. The ballet was first introduced in France in the reign of Louis XIII., and both that monarch and Louis XIV. occasionally took part in its dances. About the year 1700 women made their first appearance in the ballet, which up to that time had been performed exclusively by men, as was the case also with plays and operas, but no woman ballet dancer of any note appeared until 1750.
How She Caught Them.
 "How did you happen to get four times as many letters as I did?" said one washerwoman who had advertised for work by the day to another who had advertised for the same thing.
 "Wound up my advertisement by saying I was on a diet," said the lucky one. "That 'on a diet' notice goes right to the heart of stingy souls who are trying to cut down expenses. They hate to figure on a washerwoman's meals and jump at the chance of getting one who doesn't eat."—New York Sun.

Often the Case.
 "You can pretty safely bet," began the man who thought he knew, "that any woman who doesn't gush over a pretty baby is a confirmed old maid."
 "Not always," replied the real washerwoman. "She may be a mother who has a baby she thinks is prettier."—Catholic Standard and Times.
