The spirit actuating the business men of Sumter to make that city a tobacco market demonstrates what can A. Come to Manning and give THE TIMES advertisers an opportunity to make you prices. The election commissioners of Sumter county, at their meeting yesterday had rather a strenuous day of it, and their labors are not concluded yet. Both sides, prohibitionists and dispensaryites are fighting hard over the narrow margin of votes. At the forenoon session yesterday the count, after throwing out illegal votes showed a majority of two for the prohibitionists, but the election was not declared, the board taking a recess until the afternoon to give time for the attorneys to get further evidence, at the afternoon session more changes were made, and the vote showed a majority of one for the dispensaryites. Another adjournment was taken until today without the board having declared the result. Under the present conditions, both sides claiming the election, there is every reason to believe nothing short of the courts will settle the controversy. Both sides seem determined, and each side is taking advantage of every tech-nicallity. One of the points raised by prohibitionists is that the tickets used in the election was not of legal size, and one of the points raised by the dispensarvites is that a number of tickets voted were marked, so we say both sides are making a desperate fight, and the courts will have to settle it Williamsburg, our other adjoining county, has also a contest on this quesists had won by a majority of two, but the Dispensaryites claim that at two boxes votes were cast illegally, and the to Kingstree, the board did not declare the result, and appointed the 30th to hear arguments from both sides. Impractical. Charleston, S. C., August 23, 1913. Editor Manning Times:-Your edi-torial comment in the issue of The Times of August 20th, evidently referrthis town what it should be—a first class ing to a communication of mine in the an average of $21.00. News & Courier of a previous date, concludes thus: "The proposition renot only to be registtered, but he must an average of $20.25 also sign his name in the presence of the managers on his registration certificate would be impractical and burdensome, and therefore, out of reason. So far as we are concerned rather than have this red tape, the Australian sys-tem is far preferable, and we are rather inclined to the belief that some such vstem as the Australian system will be good compromise." Not having the full text of the bill which I propose to introduce at the next session you are, of course, not supposed to know that my proposed bill provides for a full and complete "Australian system," but that system alone does not prevent repeatng; it does not prevent ballot box stuffing and it does not prevent one man voting in another man's name. If you will refer to the history of the so-called 'Australian system' you will find that it is not Australian at all. It is a system of voting which they adopted in England in the late seventies or the early eighties. Henry George, then in the prime of his active life, was anxious to transplant this election system in the United States, and as the prejudice against english institutions were pronounced in those days he thought that the name 'english' would retard its adoption and therefore he named it the 'Australian system." Now, this system was adopted by the people of England n those days because the landlords therefore were in a position to coerce Mrs. Furman Bradham. and control the voters by reason of the fact that they had then what was practically an open ballot-somewhat on the style of our primary system in South Carolina now-and all they then required for their protection was a secret ballot so that their landlords could not know how each individual voted. That was a long step and really the first step towards honest elections. By itself the Australian system reduces the oppor tunities for dishonesty by reason of the fact that the buyer of the vote is never sure whether the seller thereof delivertion, a canvass of the vote in that coun-ty yesterday show that the Prohibition-Mr Editor, in the language of a once great man "You and I are practical people." > I cannot see why you designate the idea of making a voter sign his name in presence of the managers "impractical and burdensome." Under my proposed system it will take ruch less time to find a registered name on the booksby the number-than it does now to find a Smith, for instance, in two or three pages of S's. privilege or duty. Under my proposed bill possibility of fraud will not be entirely eliminated, that is hardly to be looked for as yet, but if enacted into a law it will reduce it to such infinitesimal proportion that it will not be worth the corruptionist's while to bother with it. When they cannot bring floaters, cannot stuff the boxes and cannot otherwise vote their henchmen in other people's names the only thing left for them to do is to buy a vote on confidence in the man that sells his vote that he will vote as he is asked to do, and the man that buys the vote must be at least a hundred and a vote on confidence in the man that fifty feet away from him when he votes Mr. Editor, your influence through your paper and on the floor of the Senate will add materially to the strength of the forces desiring to see a real improvement of present conditions.
