A soft drizzling rain was daring the roses in Constance Atwood's cheeks to come out and get wet. And the roses were fast appearing as she walked briskly through the damp cinder path in Central park.

It was Saturday afternoon and Constance had promised herself that she would finish knitting the last of her six pairs of socks for the soldier boys before the Wednesday boat should have sailed. Her small brother and sister, being prevented by the rain from playing out of doors, would demand the attention of Sister Constance if she were at home. Therefore she decided to seek the shelter of a summer house in the park, where on a day like this she was sure to

A beautiful girl sitting alone in a summer house on a cold, drizzling day knitting socks is not an everyday picture. Indeed it was such an unusual sight to Donald Grey when he came upon it that he almost stopped in his course to stare.

Constance looked up casually as he passed and her calm, level gaze met his; then she dropped her eyes, continued her knitting and the man strode on through the winding path.

But the man's peace of mind had been disturbed. Only his deep-rooted sense of chivalry kept him from retracing his steps for one more look at the lovely girl. He realized that he had only a slender chance in a thousand of seeing her again, and yet at that moment he could think of no other person whom he so desired to see again—and often.

Suddenly his musings were abruptly interrupted by the approach of a big Irish park policeman leading a small child reluctantly by the hand. The officer had to stoop to keep a hold of the tiny tot.

"Gotta lost kid!" he said laughingly to Donald. Donald looked at the pretty little girl. "Fine day for a youngster like that to be alone in the park, isn't it?"

ma's knittin' and she run off," volunteered the policeman further. Donald Grey paled a little. "Knitting, did you say? Her-her moth-

"Fine for the pneumony! Says her

"Sure! Why not? Ain't they all a-doin' it day an' night for Tommy Atkins and the loike o' him?" asked

"I saw a young woman back in the summer house-a-knitting," said Don-the officer.

"Where?" asked the policeman, alertly. "Til show you-it's quicker," and Donald led the way back to the summer house The little one trotted beside the hig policemen and Donald, humming gayly. She seemed not to care who her protectors were, so long as she was having a little excitement. Don-aid could see that much in the tot's When she saw the trio approaching Constance stopped knitting and stared. But Donald could see at a glance that she had not lost anybody's baby. She looked from one to the other as the three drew close. "Askin' yer pardon, lady, but did ye lose this kid?" asked the police-Constance laughed. She shook her head. "No, indeed, I didn't. Is the poor baby lost?"

"She sure is-says her ma's a-knittin' and she run away-" "Ma's doin' that," said the child gayly, pointing to Constance and her

"Is she, dear?" asked Constanceand Donald realized that she had the voice, too, of his ideal. "And where did you leave your mamma?" The child made a vague gesture.

"Over home with lots o' ladies all knittin' and-" The policeman took the child again by the hand. 'Come on, kid, you'll catch cold out here. I'll find her ma all right. Much obliged." And the big policeman and the little one walked off in the drizzling rain. Donald Grey raised his hat. "I'm "Oh, it was quite natural, I'm sure. Don't apologize. I only hope they find the baby's mother soon. It's not a day for little ones to be out." The girl's tone dismissed him and Donald strode on. This time he felt desperate. If he had wanted to know her after a single glance at her, he longed more than ever now that he had seen her smile, and heard her speak, had stood before her. He would have felt utterly hopeless if he had not been a firm believer in the good Presbyterianism that everything that happens is for the best. If this was the way he was to meet her, never to see her again, why-that was all. If she were meant for him-and with his youthful, hopeful outlook on life, he believed she was-he would find her somewhere. For nearly two years he sought her, and then, at a benefit dance given to aid the widows and children of soldiers who had fallen in the war, he

of the evening. "At last, Miss Atwood," he said. And although the girl only smiled, he had the satisfaction of seeing in her eyes a glad look, as if she too. had been hoping. "And if it is fate." he said to himself in a firsh "of course, she has been howing too."

The Soldier's Ignorance. The soldier's ignorance is not always restricted to the place in which he is fighting. The prospect of having to regard the khedive as an enemy reminds one of an anecdote of the Sudan campaign. It was after the fall of Omdurman; the khalifa was being puraned, and there was a false report that he had been captured. "Hooray, Bill," one British soldier was heard to shout to another; "we've got the bloomin' kaydiff!" Tommy was in charming ignorance of the fact that he had been marching under the khedive's flag ever since he had started on the cam-

Farm Loans!

We are in the Market for loans upon improved farm lands in South Carolina at seven per cent. annual interest. Loan values restricted to an amount within forty per cent. of the appraised value of the land alone. The terms of the loan will be five. years, with an annual repaymyment of principal based on the security in each loan.

Opportunity to Assist Your Local Banker

The majority of banks doing business in South Carolina were organized for the purpose of handling commercial loans and not investment loans. We do not handle commercial loans, but investment loans exclusively. If the loan you have with your local bank has been standing until it is in reality an investment proposition, we suggest that you convert the same into five year mortgage on your real estate, thereby procuring a lower rate of interest and relieving your local bank.

Upon request we will be glad to mail you application blank.
