Some Farmers Use Their Brains. Some Use Only Their Hands. Others Use Both.

Better Find Out Your Class, Friend Farmer

To know good methods and not use them is the same as not knowing. It's like starving with plenty to eat all around you. This kind of thing is not confined to farmers alone. We are all guilty of false reasoning more or less, but we must play strong on the LESS and look at farming as a business, and cut out the "penny wise pound foolish" methods. Any half informed farmer knows that his land should be completely covered with a growing crop throughout the winter, that oats, rye, barley and wheat will make this needed cover, produce fine grazing, make food for man and beast, and conserve the otherwise wasted fertility of the soil, which, with the straws returned to the land in manures furnishes that much needed element called humus (a thing that cannot be bought in bags, no matter what kind of fertilizers you use, nor what price you pay), which makes the grains you buy in the spring yield better results, and your crops stand more floods and draught.

These Facts Most Farmers Know. The Question is Do You Use These Facts For What They're Worth?

High priced fertilizers and the boll weevil will make a strong combination to fight.

Are You Prepared For The Scrap?

Think it over and come, let us explain the merit of a wonderful land improver.

SUMMERTON NEWS NOTES

When this article goes to press we will know who our next president will be. We are mighty glad that President Wilson is holding the lead so far.

The members of the Home Demonstration Club held a community fair here last Saturday, November 4th, which was quite a success. This fair speaks well for our community, and doesn't seem as though hard times are knocking at our doors. It would be hard to say who deserved blue ribbons had they been awarded, but I want to say that unless other communities "get busy," Summerton will carry off some blue ribbons from the county fair. Hurry up neighbors and see what you can do!

Mrs. H. A. Fischer after spending several days with relatives in Sumter has returned home.

Mr. Bishop McCleod's friends are glad to see him out again after a recent illness of typhoid fever.
