OF INTEREST TO OUR FARMERS

CLOVER SEEDING

Department Urges that Every Precaution Be Taken to Prevent Failure of the Crop.

While clover to be seeded with winter grain is already in the ground, and a considerable acreage is annually put in with oats, the United States Department of Agriculture calls attention at this time to the need for using every care to get a stand of clover. Red clover seed is high in price now and there is no reason to think that considerable importations from Europe can be looked for during the coming year. It is highly desirable that the failure of clover seedings be minimized as much as possible, both from the standpoint of conserving our seed supplies and of assuring a satisfactory hay crop for the year 1917-18. The following suggestions are therefore made at this time when land is being prepared for seeding oats.

Many fields, especially in the East, are benefited by lime. The application of lime alone will not always insure a catch of clover, but on the greater part of the farms on which clover frequently fails, lime may be applied profitably. Probably at least half of the clover failures could be prevented were plenty of lime used. The kind of lime to be used will depend on the price, freight charges, and cost of hauling. This is assuming that it is all of good quality. Roughly twice as much ground limestone must be applied as of burnt lime and where freight and hauling charges are high, the smaller quantity to be handled may make burnt lime cheapest. The State experiment station or the county agent can best advise in particular cases.

The use of lime in some form when preparing the land for oats with clover is urged as an important step toward assuring a stand of clover.

(2) Use Early Variety of Oats.

Use an early variety of oats and do not seed heavily. The oat crop is hard on the clover growing with it in that it shades the latter and draws heavily on the supply of moisture. Oats are harvested during hot weather and droughts are not unlikely at that time. It is at this time that the greatest mortality occurs among the young clover plants. If the stand of oats is thick, there is more shading and there is also a greater draft on the water supply. To minimize the chances of loss of a catch of clover, use an early oat and sow relatively thin. A bushel of oats per acre may not give quite the yield that 2 1-2 bushels will, but there is twice the chance for the clover, and where this is needed, it is important enough to be given a fair show.

(3) Handling the Oats.

If oats have been seeded thickly and the season turns dry it will be worth while to consider whether the oat crop would not better be cut for hay than to be allowed to mature. Oat hay is good hay and the clover will certainly have more chance if the oats are cut in the dough than if they are allowed to ripen. Of course, each farmer must balance the arguments for himself in each case, but in deciding he should give due weight to the importance of the stand of clover.

(4) Alsike Clover with Red.

Sowing some alsike clover with the red is practiced a great deal and is a good partial insurance. The alsike will often catch on poor or sour spots where the red will not and this makes the field more uniform. Sometimes, indeed, a field of this sort comes out pure alsike, when, if only red had been seeded there would have been no stand. This is especially true of low lands that may be overflooded or drowned out in a wet year. Red clover will not stand such conditions, but alsike will. A seeding of 4 pounds of alsike with 8 pounds of red makes a good amount for an acre.

ALFALFA SEED WARNING

Commercial Turkistan Alfalfa Seed Not Adapted to General Use in United States.

Commercial Turkistan alfalfa seed, which formerly came to this country through Europe, is now being imported into the United States by the way of Vladivostok and the Pacific Ocean. Since July 1, 1916, two and one-half million pounds have been imported, or enough to seed 125,000 acres. Under most conditions it is decidedly inferior to American-grown strains, and no farmer should sow it thinking he is using American-grown seed. The following statements show how Commercial Turkistan alfalfa is regarded by experts of the United States Department of Agriculture.

"Generally speaking, Commercial Turkistan alfalfa has proved to be inferior to the American-grown strains in nearly every case where comparative tests have been conducted. In the eastern half of the United States, where alfalfa seed is not produced in commercial quantities, imported seed was used almost exclusively until within the past few years. Of the several million pounds of alfalfa seed that have been imported annually, approximately 95 per cent came from Turkistan. This fact is responsible for many of the failures that occurred with alfalfa in the Eastern States. In brief, the Commercial Turkistan alfalfa yields less than the American-grown strains, is shorter lived, and is less hardy than the Grimm, Baltic, and Canadian Variegated. It is therefore not a desirable variety."

Commercial Turkistan alfalfa seed can be readily distinguished from that of other strains by the presence of seeds of Russian knapweed.

The latter are slightly larger than alfalfa seeds and can not be entirely removed by any known method of recleaning. Their chalky-white color makes them especially conspicuous, and their symmetrical form, being slightly wedge shaped, serves to distinguish them from the notched seed of other similar weeds, which often occur in Italian and other alfalfa seed. As the seeds of Russian knapweed are not usually abundant, a small trade sample should never be used to determine whether the seed is Commercial Turkistan alfalfa. It may often happen that a number of small samples, such as are usually supplied by the trade, contain none of these seeds, while an examination of the bulk will show them to be present. If any seed of Russian knapweed occur, the alfalfa seed is wholly or in part from Turkistan.

The Seed Laboratory, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., will examine half-pound samples to determine their possible Russian Turkistan origin, or small samples of imported seed containing the characteristic seeds of Russian knapweed will be sent on request.

Further information concerning Commercial Turkistan alfalfa will be found in United States Department of Agriculture Bulletin No. 138, "Commercial Turkistan Alfalfa Seed," and in Farmers Bulletin No. 757 "Commercial Varieties of Alfalfa."

Dixieland. At this Reunion Washington expects to outdo itself, for Washington is a city where entertaining has become an art. The visiting heroes of the valiant Southland are assured of hospitality that will remain in their minds as a pleasing memory as long as they and their friends live. Blue will welcome Gray, and instead of being a strictly Southern affair, it will become a National event, and one of National significance.

Washington is always beautiful, but in its vernal glory and beauty it is thrice beautiful, and ever Confederate Veteran and his friends should not let this opportunity pass to visit the first city in the land, and one of the wonder cities of the world.

Washington will welcome the "Johnnies" with a hospitality almost Arabian, everything for their pleasure, comfort and convenience will be provided. The Great Plaza fronting the Union Station, practically under the shadow of the Golden Dome will be converted into a camp of a thousand tents. Trolley lines, automobiles and railroads will carry Veterans and their friends to the many Civil War battlefields, and to Mount Vernon, where are located the home and tomb of George Washington.

Washington is pervaded today with the spirit of war preparation for the great struggle we are entering into with the warring nations of Europe makes the city doubly interesting.

The rebel yell, "Dixie" and the "Star Spangled Banner" will blend along Pennsylvania Avenue, and awaken the echoes, arouse the patriotism as nothing else possible could.

The railroads are showing their patriotism and interest in the memorable event by giving the lowest rates ever offered, and it is believed that this will be the means of bringing a large attendance.

In addition to this event, others of importance will be held the same week. The Sons of Confederate Veterans, the Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Confederated Southern Memorial Association, beside Regimental reunions, and the social functions which always are elaborate features of the Reunion.

A visit to Washington under such circumstances will be both interesting and instructive, and especially so coming at such a time when our country is preparing for war.

WILL SEND MANY SURGEONS

Thousand to Be on Firing Line in Three Months.

Washington, April 29.—Plans for sending 1,000 American surgeons to Europe for service in the Allied armies were announced tonight by the general medical board of the Council of National Defense. The men will be picked by the American College of Surgeons and the aim is to have them on the firing line within three months.

The announcement was made after a conference of the medical board today with Col. T. H. Goodwin, ranking medical officer of the British forces in France, here as a member of the British war mission.

The offer of surgeons for the Allied fronts came from the regents of the College of Surgeons and won the immediate approval of the medical board. It was inspired by Col. Goodwin's story of difficulties Great Britain and France are having in keeping the immediate ranks filled, and awaits only the formal sanction of the government before selection of the men begins.

In addition to offering surgeons for the Allies the College of Surgeons with the American Medical Association, put at the medical board's disposal today its entire organization. The College of Surgeons offered the medical board for service throughout the war its director and officer staff.

Dears of forty-six medical schools meeting here today reported to the board that they had decided to make no changes in their courses towards shortening systems of instruction.

Paris, April 30.—Twenty-five Americans, students of Chicago, Wisconsin, Cornell and other universities left for the fighting front today as section 17 of the American field ambulance. They are led by Basil K. Nottel, of Larchmont, N. Y.
