Make Changes Slowly

The text book adoption to serve for the next five years has just gone into effect, and much confusion and trouble can be avoided if teachers and parents will cooperate and view the matter rightly.

We have more than a year in which to conform to the new adoption, during which time any of the text books which have been in use during the past five years are exchangeable for new books by paying the difference. Carry your old books to the depository and consult with them as to the exchange value.

For the average country school, the better plan for the present is to organize your classes as far as possible in the books the pupils used last year until you shall have had time to make a careful study to learn if the proposed change is the proper one to be made. A good place to effect a change is when the class is to be promoted when they can carry their old books and exchange them as part pay for the new ones.

Old books are being taken in at the depository, here daily, and an old book may be bought to serve in filling up some deficiencies here and there, and later on exchanged as part of the cash value of the new book. Teachers can thus avoid making a change for the entire class because one or more might not be supplied. This will not be of any disadvantage to the purchaser, because he can still swap the old book towards a new one later on, and up to December, 1918.

Many are under the impression that they must start off by placing their classes entirely in the newly adopted books. Such is not the case. Take time to consider each step, and work in your changes slowly, and in this way you can gradually work into the adopted course without any hardship on the parents who must foot the bills.

If further information is desired along this line, then consult me.

Respectfully,
E. J. Browne,
county Supt. of Education.

School Trustees Meeting

The trustees meeting held here last Friday was a complete success in all respects. The attendance was not as large as expected, yet was representative, as nearly all the school districts had representatives present. The county superintendent called the meeting to order and introduced the Rev. W. B. Duncan, who opened the meeting with devotional exercises.

Mr. S. O. O'Bryan was elected permanent chairman for this year and in organizing the association it was decided to hold another convention in the spring before the schools close.

Mr. Ellison Capers, a newly appointed member of the county board of education, was present and took a part in the discussions. Mr. W. T. P. Spratt, president of the County Fair association, and Mr. P. H. Senn, county demonstration agent, were present and explained various matters of interest of the coming fair. There will be ten school or community fairs held in the county and it is expected that these will be the means of aiding the larger county fair to be held November 7-g, inclusive.

The trustees favored a continuation of the annual field day events, and expressed the desire that it be held a little earlier if possible as some schools have already closed by the usual date.

The usual practice of paying the teachers the limit that the district is able to pay, regardless of the experience and qualifications of the teacher, was next discussed. Trustees should have a margin to encourage capable and efficient teachers by paying them more the longer they hold their positions. To pay the inexperienced and ill prepared teacher the same as the experienced, well qualified ones tends to discount the effort necessary for improvement.

The length of the daily sessions of our county schools should not be less than six hours. Some teachers follow the example of the graded schools and turn out at 2 p. m. or earlier in some instances. The work done in the average school can not be done in that time. Trustees have the right to say how long their schools shall be in daily session.

The association pledged its support to the county superintendent in maintaining a teachers' association by seeing that their teachers had a way provided to go to the meetings.

Superintendent Browne explained the text book adoption and how the teachers of the average country school could best work in the changes. No change should be made until the teacher has had time to investigate thoroughly. Old books can be swapped as part pay for the new ones. Old books may be bought at the depository here to fill out in some instances, temporarily, and then used later in exchange for the new books. Make changes slowly. One year's time is given to work in the changes.

The advantages of a school improvement association for each school, was thought to be of great advantage. This should take stock of the physical condition of the building and grounds, see that the school rooms are properly equipped with all things necessary, especially as to proper stoves, light, boards, fuel, etc. Too many schools suffer for lack of proper fuel.

Commendatory resolutions were passed thanking Superintendent Brown for his interest and zeal, and the success of this meeting. The association will meet again next spring.

WALHALLA GIVES OCONEE MEN ROUSING SEND-OFF

Walhalla, Sept. 19.—Two thousand citizens were present at the school auditorium last night in honor of Oconee's selectmen, 63 of whom left this morning for Camp Jackson. There was music and oratory galore. Each soldier was given a soldier's kit, cigars, cigarettes and punch by the Red Cross. The moving picture people at Seneca and Walhalla showed stirring war films, to which all soldiers were admitted free.

The flag given by Governor Manning to Oconee for raising the largest quota to the Red Cross fund was presented by Col. R. T. Jaynes.

Tremendous crowds were at the train this morning to cheer the liveliest bunch that ever left for war.
