

GOOD TOBACCO

Is advancing in price every day. Cheap grades of tobacco is still off in price, but a little higher than on opening.

Farmers should be extra careful to cure their stems thoroughly, and above all, keep the tobacco dry. When you load up drive straight to

The Most Interesting Thing in the World

Do You Know What It Is?

Is there a subject so interesting that one never tires hearing of it? Is there anything which will grip the attention of the wise and ignorant, the rich and poor, the high and low alike?

THERE IS!

Rev. Andrews is a good preacher, and he will deliver thirty or forty sermons here. Crowds are coming in spite of the rain. Greater crowds will come. We know it. Already much interest is being manifested.

Mr Curry is a good singer, and he is getting his chorus to work. We are having good music.

NOW LISTEN, MAN

No two men could interest and entertain you six times in succession on any subject except the Gospel. Andrews talks it—plain Gospel. Curry sings it—Gospel in song, and you know that your heart responds because there is a hunger in you which only the Gospel can satisfy.

Quit worrying about your own selfish little soul. Get interested in some other soul—Try to make this a better world for others. Ask God to make you a useful man and try to be useful.

RIOT IN WASHINGTON CLAIMS MANY LIVES

Washington, July 21.—At midnight tonight the known casualty list in Washington's race war totaled ten, including two deaths, and two men probably dying, while unconfirmed police reports placed the number at a much greater figure. Of the dead, one was a city detective, shot through the breast by a negro woman who was firing indiscriminately from the upper story of her house.

The negress, a girl about 17, also was shot but not fatally. In another part of the city a negro firing from a garage door kept a provost guard of soldiers, sailors and marines at bay for several minutes but finally was shot down.

The probable death list in the nights fighting later was increased by the death of a second city detective who succumbed to wounds received earlier in the evening in the fight which resulted in the instant death of his fellow detective.

Many clashes occurred between white men and negroes on street cars. One negro attacked on the back end of a car, fired into a crowd following the car and wounded four persons, but finally was stopped by a city detective who was reported to have sent seven bullets into the negro's body. The White men were only slightly wounded.

The fighting at midnight had resolved largely to fighting between small groups and in one of these encounters a marine was reported to have been killed. Although service men had taken part in the early clashes the most serious were those in which the mobs were made up of civilians.

A crowd of more than 3,000 persons congregated at Peace Monument, at the foot of the capitol shortly after the house adjourned and members were leaving for their homes. A negro had started an argument with a white soldier and bystanders rushed to take a part. Street cars were halted and traffic was blocked for several hundred yards in each direction. Before anything serious developed, however, four automobiles filled with police reserves made through the crowd and halted the disturbance. Later in the evening Patrolman Bunn, crack-shot of the department was struck by a bullet fired by a negro in the North west section of the city, the most exclusive residential district. The bullet struck the patrolman's arm and he was unable to return the fire. The negro escaped, outrunning a crowd of civilians.

Two negroes were seriously injured late in the afternoon near the house office building. One had been accused by several soldiers of having tried to steal a bicycle and when he attempted escape he was overtaken and beaten. The other negro, believed to be a chauffeur for a representative, intervened and was beaten into unconsciousness. The soldiers got away before the arrival of the police.

As the night wore on the crowds on the downtown streets seemed to grow larger, notwithstanding that all Washington citizens had been warned by the district authorities to remain off the streets tonight.

Make a New Car Out of Your Old One

A couple of dollars worth of Lucas Automobile Paint and a good brush will work wonders in sprucing up an old car. Come let us show you all about it.
