SHOES

No shoddy soles at this store. Every pair up in quality and down in price. For both sexes and all ages.

Everybody is taking a wallop at old Hi Cost—with their tongues. That's easy. Tongue work costs nothing. But the dealer who actually puts it into effect is the man you are looking for.

But that is exactly what we are doing. While prices are continually going up elsewhere, we are painstakingly keeping them down at this store. Every time the wholesaler raises us a cent or two we lop off another cent or two from our already slender profits. We are skating on thin ice, we know, but we are determined to keep our own prices down, at all costs.

HORRORS PRACTICED

BY TURKISH MOBS

N. A. Boyajian, a native Armenian now in Columbia, tells the following story:

"It was a cold winter evening, the streets of our town were filled with Turkish soldiers; the terrorized inhabitants rich and poor ran home like frightened birds from an imminent threatening tempest. The criminal minded Turkish government armed the Mohammedan mob to cover the awakening land with veil of terror. Every body was hastening home to be locked behind double bolted doors and latched windows. Our people began shuddering inside their houses. At a late hour in the evening, the Turkish officers with their horde gave orders to ravish the town. The doors were opened and in rushed the officers, and soldiers with a drunken Mohammedan mob following for the purpose of finding papers, books, Bibles, weapons.

"The order was given, and the heads of the families were put under arrest and the searching began and carried on in every room of the homes huge axes were used for the purpose of tearing away the floors, the furniture, the closets and every available hiding place. Thus the night was spent in demolishing the houses, arresting the inhabitants, every house being singly searched in this brutal manner. That was the searching.

"By the next morning as dawn was awakening and the cocks crowing even from the knapsacks of the Turks, a low moaning came from the end of the town, a moaning which swelled and grew in volume that became intermingled with the shrieks of the dying, the pitiful cry of children. Weeping was of no avail. From adjoining homes, families were coming forth scantily clothed, with but the slightest amount of food. Babies were tied to the backs of the mothers, starting on their journey, for many through the valley of the shadow of death, the husbands being torn away from their wives and put into the Turkish dungeons, many of them being tortured in the center of the streets. The mobs carried the innocent girls of the town to the harems their rebellious scream being heard for a great distance. The most prominent men of the town, the lawyers, the doctors, the merchants, were all taken to the dungeons.

"A person who has not seen one of these Turkish dungeons can not possibly conceive of the horrors that are bred therein or realize the sufferings that they inflict upon their prisoners, the loathsome vices which are continually and openly practiced, the horrible blasphemies revolting obscenities and ribald jests which alternated with cries of pain.

"In this dark, damp foul fever-nest, dungeon, men can be heard moaning and groaning with pain from a shattered arm or leg. In one corner of this same hellish pit, a knot of Turks, whose dull eyes are fired with bestial lust surrounded a Christian boy, who pleaded for mercy with a heart harrowing voice. Many of the prominent men were put into a sentry box bristling with sharp spikes and forced to stand there motionless, without food or drink for 24 hours. It was thus that hundreds of them succored and met their death, refusing to their last breath to give up the Christian religion and to betray their noble nation. "Dr. Tenikapian most highly educated man in the community, was stripped naked and flogged, the whips leaving their livid traces and his distorted features revealing the anguish which he had endured. The louder he cried the more heavily fell the whip. Prominent men in the prisons were tortured with red hot spits, applied to their breasts, faces and feet, their tongues being burned with red hot pincers.

"Three or four nights passed in just such hellish orgies and days in inventing new tortures upon the prisoners, with an ingenuity which reveals unimagined strata of malignity in the human heart. The results throw the most sickening horrors of the middle ages into the shade. Some of them can not even be described, nor even hinted at. The shock of peoples' sensibilities would be too terrible. And yet they were not merely described but endured by men of education and refinement.

"There were 400 men in our town who were put into a building which was set on fire and burned. Those who tried to escape the fire through the windows were shot down by the Turks from the outside. Many small boys and girls were hacked to pieces. The towns and villages were reduced to ashes and on every side, ruin and desolation reigned supreme."

RED CROSS WILL LEAVE SIBERIA

Washington, Jan. 18.—Orders providing for withdrawal of American Red Cross personnel from Siberia when American troops start homeward have been cabled, it was announced tonight, to headquarters at Valdivostok of the commission headed by Lieut. Col. Rudolph B. Teusler, of Virginia. All women workers and such of the men as are not needed to care for supplies now on hand at Valdivostok will move out with the troops, while the drugs and other stores probably will be distributed to civilians and hospitals as rapidly as possible, closing up the Red Cross work in that section.

Recapitulating the work of the Red Cross Commission sent to Siberia July 1918, a statement issued here today said its operations at one time covered a stretch of 5,000 miles from Valdivostok to the Ural Mountains. The personnel includes 400 American doctors, nurses and other workers and 1,000 native helpers. Several of the women workers lost their lives in fighting the typhus epidemic in Siberia which constantly engaged the commission's attention.

One of the finest achievements of the commission was the rescue of several hundred homeless children, found in the Urals, reduced to a state bordering on slavery.

These little ones, ranging in age from three to sixteen, strayed from or deserted by their teachers, were gathered into colony at Lake Turayak and subsequently removed to a Red Cross orphanage on Russian Island in Valdivostok harbors. Steps for continuation of their guardianship in safe hands will be taken as the Red Cross withdraws.

FFLU IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Twelve hundred new cases of influenza were reported to the health department during the last 48 hours, Health Commissioner Robertson announced tonight. Deaths from influenza and pneumonia during that period totalled 51.

Operating from the eight municipal tuberculosis dispensaries, an army of 625 volunteer nurses will take the field tomorrow and visit every case of influenza reported.

Berkeley, Cal., Jan. 18.—Securities and other loot valued at more than $100,000 taken from a mail car of a Southern Pacific train by a lone bandit last night were recovered by railroad detectives near here today.

That the robbery may total $200,000 or more is the belief of railroad officials. The exact amount can not be determined until a check is made of the records. No trace of the robbers was found during the day.
