

WOOD'S PLEA IS MORE WORK AND LESS TALK

Rigid Economy in Administration of National Affairs. A Budget System.

Pierre, S. D., March 21.—Gen. Leonard Wood, endorsed by the Republican State convention for the presidential nomination and United States Senator Miles Poindexter, Independent candidate for the nomination, have met here in the debate required by South Dakota law of all candidates seeking presidential nomination in the State. Gen. Wood placed special emphasis on "Americanism," while Senator Poindexter dwelt particularly on labor problems.

Gen. Wood made a plea for a platform of "America first, through justice and fair dealing and government under the Constitution with each department functioning within its own limits."

Other proposals outlined by Gen. Wood included:

A strong but not quarrelsome foreign policy; tolerant, seeking peace, but protecting the interest of Americans wherever they are.

Sound Public Schools.

A sound public school system. An adequate wage for our teaching force.

A careful regulation of immigration with a view of keeping out undesirable and dangerous elements.

Unqualified endorsement of woman suffrage as something which will purify and strengthen American politics.

Rigid economy in the administration of national affairs. A budget system.

National and individual thrift habits less talk and more work.

A small but highly efficient regular army.

Senator Poindexter said in part: Industrial Servitude.

"The closed shop means closed opportunity. It means industrial servitude both for labor and capital and for the public. The right to work and the right to own property are among the inalienable rights of men and are so designated in all the great charters of liberty.

Strikes intended to enforce economy demands by stopping of industry and cutting off from the people their supplies of the necessities of life mean rule by force instead of by law."

The Senator said the two most vital questions before the country were national independence and industrial independence. The first, he said, was menaced by internationalism, and the second by the closed shop.

"The war," he continued, "was fought to preserve the principle of nationality; the Kaiser proposed a centralized government of the whole world. Having won the war, the President would surrender that for

HAD TO HIRE HELP.

Mrs. Vernon Says Tanlac Made Her Feel as Well as She Ever Did.

"Tanlac is the finest tonic I have ever taken. I don't think it can be excelled." These emphatic statements were made by Mrs. Ida Vernon, of 31 Henderson St., Anderson. Continuing, she said, "I took Tanlac for a bad, run-down condition and my health was so bad I was unable to do my housework when I began Tanlac. I employed a cook then. I had indigestion badly, and lots of food I could not eat, because of the suffering it would cause me. Really I was just a nervous wreck. I had been under treatment almost continuously for almost five years, but I did not seem to improve any."

"A friend in South Georgia told me about Tanlac and I took it. And the Tanlac got me to feeling as well as I ever did in my life. My appetite has returned to me, the indigestion was stopped and my whole system was strengthened. Tanlac surely did help me wonderfully. I gained about ten pounds in weight, too."

1920 in the Forty-third annual convention of the South Carolina Sunday School Association.

"The new day in which we are living constitutes a challenge to the religious forces of our country, and it is the privilege and duty of the Sunday School as the greatest existing agency for popular religious education to meet this challenge.

"Religious education for all the people is the greatest task of our day. It has become a great national responsibility, and can be met only through the proper co-operation of all the Christian forces.

"We, therefore, call upon the white citizens of South Carolina who are interested in the religious education of all the people to attend this convention. The South Carolina Sunday School Association is a voluntary, unofficial organization of Sunday School workers. The attendance at the convention is, therefore, not limited to officially appointed delegates, but is open to the public, and all who register will be accepted as delegates."

United States Trade in South America Not Lost.

Buenos Aires, Feb 20.—Some British interests here have undertaken a publicity campaign in what has been referred to as "the great struggle" between the United States and Great Britain for the markets of South America. "Special telegrams" from London, purporting to show that the United States is losing her South American markets, or otherwise disparaging the United States, have been gratuitously distributed by a British advertising agency and have been widely published in Argentine newspapers.

One of the telegrams was a criticism of Herbert Hoover for saying that the European countries should "work more and ask less of the United States." The "telegram" made a comparison between the losses sustained by the European allies in the war, particularly the British dominions, as compared with those of the United States and pointed out that the losses of European countries had reduced their productive capacity, whereas the United States had not suffered at all economically.

Another of these "special telegrams" quoted the president of the British board of trade in London as saying: "I believe that the United States is gradually losing the markets gained when Germany was wiped off the seas and while Britain was fighting in the war. Britain is not only regaining, but is enlarging her markets in South America and the Orient.

Germany in Latin America and supplanting the United States in war markets."

The truth of this statement as far as it concerned Argentina was immediately challenged by the River Platte American, a weekly commercial magazine, which has published an interview from Dr. Julius Klein, United States commercial attaché.

"Frankly," said Dr. Klein, "I'd like to know in what lines the British are enlarging their South American trade at our expense. The latest available figures showed anything but a loss, so far as our business in these markets is concerned. Perhaps the president of the board of trade is referring to prospects for 1920, for which, however, no figures are as yet available, so far as I know.

"Speaking in the light of the latest statistics which showed that we were selling to Argentina approximately one-third of all the goods she buys abroad—and from personal observation since then, there has been no indication of losses to American trade. I have no doubt that we are going to meet with good strong competition from the British, but the inclination of the American experter seems to be to say 'Come on; we're ready for it.'"

ALDERMAN STORES

The Highest Developed Tractor

THIS Case 10-18 Kerosene Tractor is noted for its Simplicity, Accessibility, Flexibility and Durability. Almost anyone can operate and care for this improved tractor.

Every part is easily accessible. You need not waste your time in getting at the parts. Transmission housing, differential gear housing, clutch, crank case, every working part, can be reached for inspecting or adjusting without trouble or loss of time.

This Case 10-18 is small and compact. It can be taken almost everywhere. Its turning radius is about 11 feet.

It has a one-piece main frame. So there is no racking nor vibration—none of the twisting which is so destructive. The motor is set crosswise; this permits use of all spur gears. All gears are cut steel, enclosed, and run in oil.

This tractor easily handles two plows 7 or 8 inches deep. It has plenty of reserve power. For all kinds of field work it is unequaled.

It also is a wonder for belt work. It will readily drive a Case 20x28 thresher, fully equipped, a No. 12 Case silo filler, or other machines requiring similar power. Before you buy, investigate this better tractor. Note all its superiorities. Make comparisons.
