A GROWING NUISANCE

Speed maniacs are becoming too great and promiscuous a nuisance in this country. As we have remarked in these columns before, it is quite time to put an effectual curb on their speeding and maiming and killing. The people they maim or kill are of use to society. They are not. If fines will not check them, jail sentences will. In Chicago the traffickers in illicit booze had the city by the throat. They were powerful, arrogant, and contemptuous of the law, the city, the state and the government.

But one prominent offender suddenly found himself before Federal Judge Landis. He is now in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth. The booze ring is panic stricken, and the lid is down so tight it couldn't be jarred off with dynamite. If it can be done with booze it can be done with speeding. The average motorist is law abiding and considerate of the rights of others, but he suffers for the wild and criminal recklessness of the speeders. Appeals to reason and fines have had no effect upon these public nuisances. The only recourse left to the public is to put these fellows where they belong. One good jail sentence will do the work in this community. The rest of the maniacs will take to cover and suddenly develop into remarkably good Indians.

YOU CAN IF YOU WILL

His life is full of surprises, but one of the greatest of all is when a fellow first learns that to accomplish the supposedly impossible is a comparatively easy matter when he goes at it with determination and in the right manner. Too many of us are prone to consider a thing impossible without first giving it proper thought and investigation. To us it looks an insurmountable mountain simply because it is greater than the problems with which we have been accustomed to deal.

The man of strong force and character finds it easy to overcome great obstacles because he likes his work and has confidence in his ability to perform it. The average man may become forceful of character through cultivation of habit. And the cultivation of habit is more simple and easy than that of the crops in the field.

Obstacles are only obstacles to those who consider them such. To the man of will power and determination they are as pebbles in the pathway of a giant. You can, if you will.
