A TURKEY HEN IS FAITHFUL IF SHE IS PROPERLY HANDLED

Nests Hollowed Out on the Ground, Covered with Straw and Carefully Protected are Ideal—Cleanliness is Imperative; Care of Eggs.

Chicken hens and incubators can be and often are used successfully for hatching turkey eggs, but the surest means, United States Department of Agriculture poultry specialists say, is to use the turkey hen and give her proper management. Turkey hens are close sitters and will cover, so there will be no danger of chilling, from 15 to 18 eggs, depending on the size of the hen.

Nests for setting turkey and chicken hens are best made on the ground by hollowing out a little earth, so that the center is deep enough to keep the eggs from rolling out of the nest. A thin covering of clean straw or hay can then be used to prevent the eggs from being directly on the ground, and a large, roomy coop should be placed over the nest to keep the hen from being disturbed. When a number of hens are to be set, a long row of nests can easily be made on the ground, separating them with board partitions. If this is done care must be taken to see that when the hens come off the nests each returns to the right one instead of crowding into a nest with another hen and leaving some of the eggs to become chilled. With only a few hens it is better to set them some distance apart, as they will then require less attention.

When a Hen's in Earnest
When a hen becomes broody and shows that she is earnest by remaining on her nest for two or three nights, she may safely be trusted with the eggs, provided she is allowed to sit in that nest. If she is to be set in another nest, as is usually the case, then she should be removed to the new nest, preferably after dark, given a few nest eggs and shut in to prevent her from returning to the old one. If she sits quietly on the nest eggs she should be taken off on the evening of the following day, and the eggs to be incubated placed in the nest. On being freed, she probably will return to her old nest; if so, she should be carried back and set quietly on the eggs. She should be handled in this manner until on being let off she returns to the new nest rather than to the old one. It sometimes takes only two or three days, and seldom more than a week, to break a hen from returning to her old nest. Turkey hens do not ordinarily come off for feed and water more than once every 2 or 3 days, but when confined they should have a chance to come off every day. Occasionally a turkey hen does not come off at all, and in such case she should be taken off once a day, as otherwise she will die on the nest.

On coming off her nest the first thing a turkey hen does is to stretch her wings, step gingerly for a few steps, and then she often takes a running start and flies for a short distance. Exercise of this sort helps greatly to keep a sitting hen in good condition, and for this reason it is not well to confine her to a small space. A dust bath is greatly enjoyed by sitting hens, and helps to keep them free from vermin. Whole corn is a good feed, and fresh water and grit should always be accessible.

Lice are a great annoyance to sitting hens, and are one of the worst enemies of young poults. To prevent their getting a start, the hen should be dusted thoroughly with soda or lye or some good lice powder before she is placed on the nest. The nesting material should be kept clean, and if the eggs become dirty they should be washed with a soft cloth dipped in lukewarm water. Just before the poults are to hatch, the old nesting material should be replaced with clean straw.

Incubation Period
The incubation period of turkey eggs is 28 days. The first egg is usually pipped during the first part of the twenty-seventh day, the first poult hatched by the middle of that day, and the hatch completed at the end of 28 days, although in extreme cases all the poults are not hatched before the end of 30 days. Turkey eggs are tested for fertility and for dead germs, as a rule, on the tenth and twentieth days.

CUTTING THE NEWS-PAPER'S THROAT

The subscriber to the country weekly not infrequently complains when he finds the subscription price of his paper is to be doubled.

The country merchant makes a far more strenuous objection when he finds that the advertising rates are to be increased 50 per cent.

The man who wants to insert a want ad or a for sale notice deprecates the passing of the good old days when it could be done for a quarter.

The women protest that the editor is becoming a profiteer when he is compelled to charge them for the church bazaar notice that used to be free.

But every one of them is contributing to the conditions that make these increases imperative.

The subscriber, the want ad man, and the church women, all help by buying goods done up in cutely labeled paper containers, which the merchant sells.

Not one of them probably ever thought of the increasing amount of wood pulp that is going into the manufacture of these paper containers.

Not one of them has ever considered that this wood pulp consumption is making itself felt in the increased price of newspaper print paper.

Probably when it is brought to their attention, they will be indifferent. And one of these days the paper will not show up. They will have helped cut it's throat.

It has happened a thousand times last year. The remedy: Demands goods in bulk.
