It is estimated that of 24,000,000 school children in the United States 8,000,000 have defective eyes. That is one of every three children. That proportion is probably larger than found with the children in Clarendon County, but certainly there are many who need spectacles that are not wearing them.

The child's chances for getting the best from its school advantages are few if its vision is poor. You can have its eyes properly examined and fitted by

MAURICE TOURNEUR FEATURE IS BILLED

"The Great Redeemer" With All-Star Cast, Soon to Be Seen Here at The Pastime Theatre

One of the biggest screen productions of the year will be seen at the Pastime Theatre when Maurice Tourneur's super special, "The Great Redeemer," will be the feature of the bill for one day, next Monday, May 9th. "The Great Redeemer," it is announced, is a tremendous drama of absorbing human interest. According to the expectations of its producers, it is destined to be hailed as one of the really impressive photodramas of the year.

Advance reports on "The Great Redeemer" dwell with especial force upon the unusual beauty of the production from a pictorial standpoint, as well as upon its intensely dramatic theme and the tremendous moral message it carries to all who view it.

Dan Malloy, as the story goes, has eluded a posse that pursues him after he has held up a train, and takes refuge in the home of a girl of the mountains. The girl, startled by his sudden and unannounced entrance into her cabin, shoots the bandit, wounding him slightly. Later, after hearing his story and falling under the spell of his dominating personality, she begins to love him. With Dan it has been a case of love at first sight, and he is soon contemplating the abandonment of his career as a bandit for a freestone and respectability.

Temptation soon appears in the person of a former pal who tips Dan off to the fact that the limited can be held up with ease if Dan will essay one more fling at his old game. Dan succumbs and attempts the hold up, but is surrounded and captured after his pal has died fighting the forces of the law.

Dan is sentenced to a long term in prison. It is within the grim gray walls that his heart changes and he begins the long, long struggle for regeneration. The manner of his accomplishing this reform is told in the plot of "The Great Redeemer" with a new and startling touch. For a latter-day miracle is wrought that affects not only the life of Dan Malloy, but those of others in the prison and outside of it.

It is this phase of the story that contains the biggest punch of all. H. H. Van Loan, who wrote "The Great Redeemer," as well as a number of other big photodramatic successes including "The Virgin of Stamboul" and "Vive la France," got the idea for this situation from an incident that took place in a western jail. His original story was made into a scenario by Jules Furthman and Jack Gilbert, and the production was directed by Clarence Brown under the personal supervision of Maurice Tourneur.

A notable cast appears in the picture. It includes House Peters as Dan Malloy, Marjorie Daw as the girl; Joseph Singleton and Jack MacDonold. Charles J. Van Enger photographed the production, which is distributed by Metro Picture Corporation. The exterior scenes were "shot" in the most picturesque portions of California and Arizona and are said to show this land of mountains and gorgeous sunsets in all its vast and rugged beauty.
