HOME PRESERVATION OF EGGS.

During the spring months of the year the hens are in heavy egg production. There is a large supply of eggs pushed on the market which tends to bring the price down. Much of this supply finds its way into the cold storage plant where the eggs are stored for winter sales. If the eggs laid during this flush of production could be economically preserved for winter use by the consumer, a great deal could be made on the egg and Preserving of eggs at home in the spring and summer for fall and winter use is not a new practice. The practice of preserving eggs has spread over the country and each year we find more people putting eggs away in storage. The method that has given probably the best results is the water glass method. The chemical name of water glass is sodium silicate. In any method of home preservation the object is to surround the eggs with some material which will fill up the pores in the shell and keep the normal liquids within the shell from evaporating.

Method of Using Water Glass.

In this method use the following materials: Stone or earthenware crocks, a supply of sodium silicate, or water glass, and strictly fresh eggs. Each crock should have a cover.

In putting eggs down in water glass the following procedure should be followed. The crock should be washed and sterilized with boiling hot water. Be sure that it is absolutely clean. The preserving solution should be made up by taking 19 parts of water which has been boiled and cooled and 1 part of sodium silicate. Mix and stir thoroughly. The eggs should be carefully placed in the crock, small end down, care being taken so as not to break or crack any of the shells. Fill the jar up to about 2" of the top with eggs and then pour in the water glass solution and fill the crock to the top. The eggs will then be covered with 2" of this water glass solution. Place the cover tightly on the crock and set the contents in a dark cool place. By putting the cover on tightly evaporation will be lowered to a minimum. Put the preserved eggs in a basement or cellar on an elevated bench. Examine the crocks occasionally to see if more solution is needed to keep the eggs properly submerged.

The above method will preserve the eggs for a period from nine months to a year.

"Canned" eggs require a little different treatment in cooking than do fresh ones. Unless the large end is punctured before-hand, they will crack when boiled. They are entirely satisfactory for scrambling, omelets, custards, cakes, and other kinds of cooking.

Only absolutely fresh eggs should be preserved. Dirty eggs of eggs that have been washed should not be used. Washed eggs will not keep because the pores in the shell are removed by the washing, and dirty eggs will become tainted in flavor. Infertile eggs are better than fertile eggs for preserving.

Have eggs the year round. Put your surplus now down in water glass solution.

DOUBLE DECK CARS WILL BE ALLOWED.

Washington, April 14th.—Effective May 1, shippers of hogs and calves from Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia may be furnished double decked freight cars. This will reduce the freight charges nearly 50 per cent, as a double deck car can accommodate as many as two ordinary cars. Some time ago J. J. Cottrell, agent at Richmond, and a tariff denying shippers the use of double deck cars.

Instantly a loud complaint emanated from shippers, who, desperately because of the condition of the cotton market, had turned to the production and shipment of hogs.

According to a statement today furnished the Interstate Commerce Commission by F. D. Claggett, assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern Railway Company, the tariff was issued by Agent Cottrell through mistake. The case was pressed before the commission by Representative H. P. Fulmer of South Carolina who acted on request of shippers from Springfield and other sections of South Carolina. Regarding the admission of Claggett that the tariff which proved so costly to the shippers, had been issued through mistake, Mr. Fulmer said tonight:

"I am unable to see how this tariff was published through error, and I think it is offered as an excuse. But with such an admission by the railroad, it seems to me that shippers have a very clear claim against the Southern Railway for a return in the difference paid by them and the amount they would have paid had they obtained what they asked for, namely double decked cars."
