

Helps Sick Women

Cardui, the woman's tonic, helped Mrs. William Everole, of Hazel Patch, Ky. Read what she writes: "I had a general breaking-down of my health. I was in bed for weeks, unable to get up. I had such a weakness and dizziness, and the pains were very severe. A friend told me I had tried everything else, why not Cardui? . . . I did, and soon saw it was helping me . . . After 12 bottles, I am strong and well."

TAKE

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Do you feel weak, dizzy, worn-out? Is your lack of good health caused from any of the complaints so common to women? Then why not give Cardui a trial? It should surely do for you what it has done for so many thousands of other women who suffered—it should help you back to health.

Ask some lady friend who has taken Cardui. She will tell you how it helped her. Try Cardui.

High Cattle Prices Accompany High Beef Prices

If consumers are to pay less for beef, live-stock raisers naturally will receive less for cattle.

If farmers are paid more for live stock, consumers will necessarily pay more for meat.

Swift & Company pays for cattle approximately 90 per cent of the price received for beef and by-products. The remaining 10 per cent pays for dressing, freight to market, operation of distributing houses, and in most cases, delivery to the retailer. Net profits also have to come out of this 10 per cent.

This margin cannot be squeezed arbitrarily without danger of crippling the only effective means of performing the complex service of converting cattle into meat and distributing this meat to the fighting forces and to consumers.

Swift & Company's net profit on beef during 1917 was only $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent per pound. On all products, it was a little less than four cents on each dollar of sales. Complete elimination of these profits would not affect appreciably retail prices of meat, or farm prices of live stock.

Swift & Company will be glad to co-operate in devising methods that will improve conditions in the meat and live stock industry.

WILL NOT FIX THE PRICE OF COTTON.

Washington, April 19.—Senator Smith, of South Carolina, issued a statement today denying that the War Industries Board contemplated any action looking to the fixing of prices for cotton.

"The cotton market is being absolutely demoralized by those who take advantage of certain rumors as to price fixing by the Board of War Industries and by the introduction in Congress of certain bills as to price fixing," said Senator Smith.

"The War Industries Board has no power in relation to the fixing of the price of cotton, and I am informed by a member of that board that the fixing of the price of cotton has not been discussed, and no effort in that direction is contemplated.

"As to the bills introduced, there is no probability whatever of any of them being seriously discussed, much less passed."

"No bill fixing the price of cotton can pass this Congress unless prices of every article of commerce in America are also fixed."

KILL THE CROWS.

A piece of dead horse or cow treated with strichnine, and tied or wired in a tree where crows can find it, means great relief from crows. Crows destroy more small game, birds and birds' eggs than any other creature that lives. A young crow in the nest will consume daily two and three times its own weight of food. When young the crow is fed chiefly on animal food, mainly the young and eggs of other birds—young rabbits, and anything else of this kind the parent birds can gather.

Crows may be of limited benefit to a agriculture because of the harmful insects and weed seeds they destroy, but we are satisfied that the birds they destroy, if left alive, would do far more good than the crow. We recommend that crows be destroyed wherever it is possible. —Joseph Kalfus, Sec. Game Commission of Penn.

At last there has been some detailed information of the part that the Americans played in the early days of the present battle. It was on Thursday afternoon, south of the Somme. The British forces had their hands full, and there came a critical moment when it was necessary to throw fresh forces into an inadequately defended piece of line to stem the rush of oncoming Germans. British reinforcements were coming, but it was evident that it would not arrive in time. There was no time to lose, and a certain general hastily undertook the organization of an emergency regiment from various miscellaneous units nearby. Included among them were 1,500 American railway engineers, men engaged in building and repairing tracks necessary to maintain the line of communication. Among these Americans were many who had previously fought at Cambrai. They were not supposed to be fighters, but they did not hesitate a moment. Eagerly they took rifles that were provided for them and rushed out under the command of their brigadier to fill a gap of the line of about 1,200 yards. The Germans were being hurled against them in bodies they could hold but hold they did. They did tremendous execution and remained right where they were for many hours until reinforcements came up and it is admitted that they held their portion of the line as well as the British on the right and the left were holding theirs. These are the Americans which the Germans in an official report, claimed to have "taught a lesson" but since practically all of them were finally retired in good order, it is assumed that the lesson was that even engineers untrained as fighters are able to hold their own against the best the Germans have.—Yorkville Enquirer.
