

JEW'S CAREFUL AS TO MEATS.

Use Only Fore Quarters While Gentiles Eat Rest of Carcass.

Our townsman, Mr. Morris Fass, is not strictly orthodox in his religion, but he observes its laws in the spirit if not in the letter. Mr. Fass is a well-informed man and discusses Hebrew religion in an interesting and entertaining manner. He is a strong believer in the Mosaic laws, and in this respect he has the support of thousands of intelligent Gentiles. If the Mosaic laws in regard to the eating of meats and other foods were part of the fundamental law of every civilized nation the world would have today a stronger and healthier race of men and women. Mr. Fass hands a Herald man for publication a clipping from one of the New York papers which throws interesting side-lights on the slaughter of meats for Jews and Gentiles in the larger cities:

The importance of the kosher meat trade in this city, is shown in recent Government reports indicating that almost half of the city's meat is kosher slaughtered. "Kosher" is a Hebrew word meaning ceremonially clean according to Jewish law.

"During 1920," says the Market Reporter, issued by the Department of Agriculture, "there were slaughtered in New York in round numbers 438,000 cattle, 517,000 calves and 1,290,400 sheep and lambs. Of these approximately 98 per cent. of the calves and 15 per cent. of the sheep and the lambs were slaughtered and dressed in accordance with the Hebrew regulations. If in connection with the above there is taken into account the fact that between 50 and 55 per cent of the meat consumed in New York City is slaughtered locally, the importance of kosher meats becomes apparent.

While considerable numbers of live stock are koshered in almost every city of any considerable size the trade naturally reaches its greatest volume in the great centres of population like New York, Jersey City, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. New York City with its Jewish population of approximately 1,500,000 is the largest kosher meat market in the United States and possible in the world.

The fact that the kosher trade uses only the fore quarters accounts to a considerable extent for the large number of animals required to supply that class of trade. The hind quarters are always sold to the gentile trade. In New York City and Philadelphia the ribs are sold to Gentiles in addition to the hind quarters. This leaves only the chucks of plates for the kosher trade, which represents about 43 per cent. of the carcass weight. This is probably done for purely business reasons, as the rib is wholly acceptable from a religious standpoint and in most cities is used by the kosher trade along with the rest of the fore quarter.

"The kosher trade is confined almost exclusively to heavy animals, and for that reason kosher slaughter produces a tonnage of meat per given number of animals much higher than the average resulting from slaughter for gentile consumption."

Describing the method of slaughter of kosher meats, the Government report says:

"The kosher system of slaughtering differs somewhat from the general custom among Gentiles, and one of the prime requisites is that the animal bleed thoroughly. According to Jewish belief no blood should remain in the meat when consumed. For that reason the animal's throat is cut without first being stunned by a blow on the head, as is done in other killing.

"While kosher slaughter is primarily of a religious nature, being performed by the Rabbi or his deputy, it is also a system of inspection and antedates the modern Government inspection by several thousand years. The Schechter, or man who does the slaughtering, inspects the carcass and accepts or rejects it, depending upon whether or not it meets the requirements of the Hebrew law. If the carcass is accepted he affixes his official stamp. Those holding strictly to the orthodox faith insist on having kosher meat exclusively."

MODERN BOOKKEEPING METHOD SAVES MONEY

Overhead expense is the canker worm that gnaws at the vitals of every business. The problem today is to get maximum production at a minimum of expense. Old systems are costly. They waste time and lose dollars that run into big sums. The modern system is

THE LOOSE LEAF SYSTEM

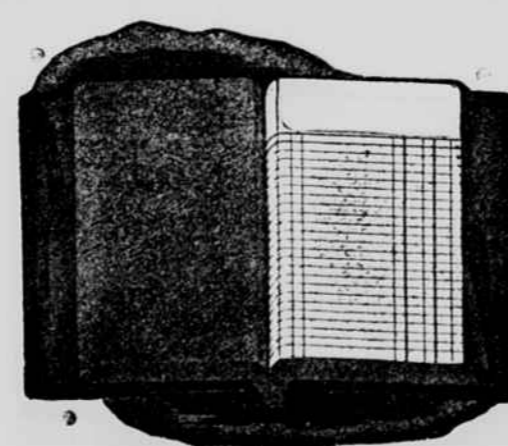

One-third of the cost of a ledger is in the binding. When you open new books you throw away one-third of the cost of your ledger. In three years you have thrown away the cost of a ledger, in addition to the time lost in transferring accounts. A loose leaf ledger will last a life time and your only expense at the end of the year is buying new leaves at a minimum of expense.

LEDGER LEAVES.

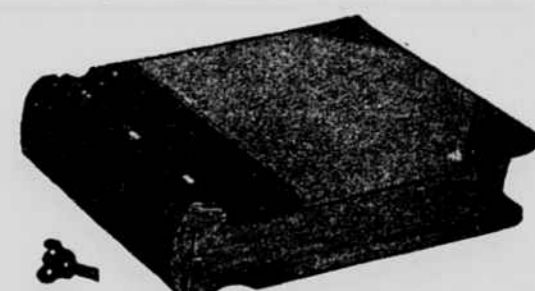

Double or single entry up to 12 columns. Machine ruled on extra heavy ledger paper. Standard forms in stock all the time. Special forms ruled on short notice.

OUR DUPLICATING LEDGER

OUR TIME SAVER

This ledger will pay for itself in time saved in three months. It carries opposite each ledger sheet an ordinary bill head perforated at one end. A carbon sheet works between the bill and a second sheet. The items are carried to the bill head and a copy is made on the second sheet. At the end of the month your statements are made out, and you tear out the bill head and mail it to the customer, keeping the second sheet in the ledger until the account is paid. It saves one-third of your book work and gives you a complete record.

THE STEELBACK LEDGER

Bound with Red Pigskin Leather — a binding that appeals to the customer who wants the best he can get. It contains a mechanism better than all others and is bound with materials that cannot be beaten. It is strictly a binder of extra grade.

Grows in popularity every year. It is a great time-saver. You make out bills from day to day as the items are entered on your ledger, and at the end of the month your statements are ready to mail out. No rush at the end of the month. No delay in getting out on time. Hundreds of these ledgers are in daily use throughout the Carolinas and our customers tell us they would not do without them for many times the cost. They cut book-keeping in half. We put them up in all sizes, bound in Red Russian cowhide back and corners, corduroy sides and strong metal parts made of the very best aluminum casting. They drop back flat when open, giving a perfect writing surface.

We are not beginners in the loose leaf line. We have been putting up loose leaf outfits for many years, and we guarantee our books to be first-class in every particular. Tell us what your business is and let us design a system to suit it. We offer you the services of an expert accountant who was for sixteen years traveling auditor for one of the largest bonding companies in America. We guarantee to give you a system that will save time and make your book-work simpler and more accurate.

We have special forms for farmers as well as merchants, bankers and manufacturers. We have forms that suit every business. We use the same presses and machinery used by other manufacturers. We employ the same skilled workmen. We use the same material and our overhead expense is less than that of the big city manufacturer.
