APRIL 16, 1902.

Wade Hampton is dead. He was a brave and chivalrous man, an honorable and courtly gentleman, a bold and brilliant soldier, an able statesman. All in all he represented the highest type of an ideal Southern gentleman. As was George Washington to his country, so was Wade Hampton to his State, a father to his people and in their hearts the first in war and the first in peace. His death will be mourned for years and his memory will live for generations.

The case of Ned Smith, charged with violation of the dispensary law, was remanded back to the magistrate from whence it came, for trial.

The last case taken up yesterday morning was that of the State against Ed Reid, charged with assault and battery with intent to kill.

The grand jury was very busy during Monday and yesterday, and did a large amount of work; but will probably not get through until today.

From the present outlook, the sessions court will easily last during the balance of the week. True bills for murder have been found against Joseph Henry, James Lindsay, Dock Lanier, Reuben Stewart, Samuel Fair.

News comes from the pension bureau at Columbia that the applications show an increase in nearly every county and it is said that although the fund was in a low state of depletion it is now being replenished.

Brief and Breezy.

If Jim Tillman took any part in entertaining the President, in South Carolina, the newspapers don't mention it.

Senator Depew wishes it distinctly understood that he is not in the market for grizzled and hoary jokes; he's got them to give away.

The gentleman of the House committee that has reported a bill for an elastic currency is not necessarily a rubber-neck.

Minister Wu would doubtless pay liberally for the privilege of doing a little talking back at Senators.

All coons look alike to the people of Lawton, Oklahoma, and they like none of them.

New York Policemen are red hot reformers when there is no chance for them to profit by winking at law-breaking.

Senator Jones, of Ark., is doubtless glad now that he owns that stock in the round bale cotton company.

Is the Clark family trying to form a Senatorial trust? There will be three Clark's in the Senate when Clark, of Ark., takes his seat.

Outside trust companies will not be allowed to handle estates in Connecticut, unless a decision of the Supreme Court of Errors can be knocked out.

The men who are about to put $6,000,000 in Marconi's wireless telegraph system are not nervous whatever else they may be.

Bank looters have been acting on the idea that the small banks had too much money on hand.

Danger at a football match isn't confined to the players. The collapse of a stand at Glasgow, Scotland, killed 21 and injured 250 persons.

That Berlin has some wideawake real estate operators was shown by the offer to sell a palace that its owner's didn't know what to do with to the United States for our embassy.

When contractors fall out the State learns that it was robbed. At least, it turned out that way in Montana.

The United States and Mexico have arranged to give the Hague arbitration commission its first job.

John Bates who has been arrested for a murder committed in 1895, is another believer in the adage, "Murder will out."

Cecil Rhodes and Andrew Carnegie appear to have had some educational ideas in common, but Rhodes waited until after he was dead to put his into practice.

The question of bar-maids or no bar-maids is said to be causing more agitation in Great Britain than the Boer war.

Catholics of Montreal have been forbidden to attend the Passion Play. More free advertising.

According to the report of the grand jury of St. Louis, its official bribery has for years been quite up to the New York, Chicago, or Philadelphia standard. If a few of the criminals can be convicted in time they would make edifying exhibits for the exposition.

Humph! So England is going to protest against the action of Congress in favoring our own people by abolishing the export duty on hemp shipped direct from the Philippines to the United States. The protest is likely to be just about as effective as one made against a parent favoring his own children.

The latest tomfoolery in connection with that special embassy to the coronation of King Edward is that its members are to pay their own expenses. It is questionable in the minds of many whether this embassy should have been named, but so long as it was named and as it will appear as the representative of this nation its expenses should be provided for by congress.
