THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, March 2. — With the new farm aid bill out of the way, congress is trying to get down to a working schedule that will let its members get away before the political conventions. A dozen or so highly controversial proposals, however, are bound to come up for discussion, and nobody can guess very accurately as yet what the outcome is going to be.

Senator Robinson, the administration's leader in the upper house, has announced that there are seven measures which he calls "live" bills whose consideration has been agreed upon by the senate leaders. One of them is going to stir up a lot of debate. That is the rural electrification bill.

There probably will be even more excitement when the bill to regulate chain stores gets on the floor. This would prohibit producers and distributors of merchandise from selling cheaper to the chain stores than they do to individual retailers. It is one of Senator Robinson's pets, with Senator Patman actively interested. It will meet with strong opposition not only from the chains and from manufacturers, but from consumer groups and from newspapers. It has about an even chance of enactment as things look now.

Four "Live" Measures

The Coolidge bill of tighten the barriers against undesirable aliens and make their deportation easier is on Senator Robinson's list. It has a good chance. The other four "live" measures, as the senate leader sees them, are the Copper stockyards regulation bills. Senator Gore's Panama toll bill, Senator Fletcher's bill to increase the capital of the Commercial Credit corporation to aid the marketing of agricultural products and another Fletcher bill exempting from taxation all securities of banks held by the RFC.

Since the passage of the bonus bill less is being heard of the so-called "pressure groups" and their influence on legislation. "Pressure group" is just a fancy word for lobbyist. It does not imply bribery, necessarily, but the pressure groups work effectively upon the fears of members of congress that they will not be reelected if they don't give these groups what they demand.

A short time ago one of the strongest pressure groups was the currency inflation bloc. It seems to be losing influence and its particular measure, the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, looks to have a slim chance. The silver bloc, which was a very strong pressure group a year ago, is not so strong now.

Coughlin and Townsend

Father Coughlin, who has been the spearhead of inflation, is not the influential figure that he formerly was. He was a powerful influence before the extent of his following was known. Now congressmen generally poo-poo the notion that he is actually able to influence any important body of voters, sufficiently concentrated in particular states or districts to influence the election of particular congressmen or senators.

The Townsend old-age pension bloc is a case in point. Outside of a few spots on the map its strength is not yet sufficiently concentrated, or at least so the leaders in congress believe. The impending congressional investigation into the Townsend movement is expected to disclose its real strength. But it will have the effect of postponing any possible action along Townsend plan lines until next session, if ever.

One of the shrewdest political observers here remarked the other day that the only pressure group which seems to be missing is the "economy bloc." Congress wants to keep on spending money, but shies like a frightened colt from the shadow of tax projects necessary to provide the money to spend. The boys on Capitol Hill all know that they have got to enact some new tax measures this session, and how they dread it. Congress has to appropriate a lot more cash for direct relief on top of WPA. The strongest pressure group of all is perhaps the one composed of governors of states and mayors of cities who insist that they cannot take care of the destitute without federal aid after April 1, when direct federal relief theoretically comes to an end.

Distribution of federal funds through relief agencies, public works, the bonus and farm relief checks is expected to keep retail business humming until after election.

Presidential Talk

Discussion of Republican presidential candidates is on every tongue in Washington. Governor Landon's apparent popular lead steadily increases. Whether he is too far out in front is being debated by his friends and his opponents. It is pointed out that four years ago, in February, Franklin D. Roosevelt was away out in front of all the contenders for the Democratic nomination, and he was the party's nominee. It is doubtful, however, whether Governor Landon has at his command the well-organized machinery for gathering delegates which Mr. Roosevelt had at that time.

Four out of five of the professional political observers here are now saying that the Republican nominee will be either Landon or a dark horse. Talk about a "dark horse" usually brings to the suggestion of Justice

Highway Affairs At Normal Pace

Road Administration, With Ben Sawyer At Helm, Runs Without Interference.

Columbia, Mar. 2.—The South Carolina highway program proceeded at a normal pace today with Chief Commissioner Ben M. Sawyer in charge, while Governor Olin Johnston maintained a steadfast silence upon the fourth judicial decision unfavorable to him in his long highway fight.

The decision, handed down by the state supreme court Saturday confirmed Sawyer in office and placed at his disposal more than $1,000,000 to pay department salaries to April 15, to meet reimbursement bond obligations, and to pay debts to contractors engaged in federal aid road construction in the state.

The governor declined to disclose his next move, and there was no indication he would take further action immediately. Sometime ago, however, he said he would take the highway issue into the summer campaigns.

He said he had not completed his decrees in removal proceedings against ten members of the 14-man highway board.

Highway department employees meanwhile cashed vouchers for their semi-monthly pay, amounting to nearly $75,000, at local banks.

The court withheld recognition of $154,000 in obligations incurred by Governor Johnston's military regime October 28 through December 20 and kept an injunction against highway fund disbursements in full effect except for the amounts released.

The decision held that Sawyer was in full legal control of the highway department. The governor had contended that the chief commissioner was without authority to resume office and act without the approval of the commissioners, ten of whom are Roberts of the supreme court. Senator Vandenberg seems to be emerging from the dark-horse class into that of a regular contender.

under suspension pending the outcome of his ouster proceedings.

Three circuit courts previously had reversed his removal orders against three other commissioners.

Meanwhile, a bill passed by the house and pending in the senate, would provide legislative election of highway commissioners instead of executive appointments with senate confirmation.

The governor has advocated popular election of the road commission.
