NERVOUSNESS!

This is a condition usually characterized by such symptoms as extreme sensitiveness, fears, anxiety, poor concentration and general inability to carry on with routine everyday duties properly. To sum it up, the sufferer is usually miserable to himself, and his presence makes it very miserable for those with whom he associates.

The underlying CAUSE of this condition is found definitely to be in the SPINAL NERVOUS system of the body, where delicate nerve fibres become irritated, due to misaligned segments of the spinal column. This weakened condition of the nervous system makes it impossible for the normal transmission of the VITAL NERVE ENERGY which travels these nerve paths. It is important, then, to employ some means whereby this condition can be located and corrected. This the competent Chiropractor effectively does — with the aid of the Neurocalometer or Nerve meter, and X-ray spinograph, which gives us a visual of the offending vertebra.

If you are suffering with nervousness and feel that nothing has been done for your condition, there is definite hope for you in competent Chiropractic.
