THE PUZZLE of THE YEARS

KEEPING accurate track of years has been one of human history's toughest problems. Many a headache and much trouble have dogged those who dared to tackle it.

Seven hundred years before Christ, a smart Roman named Pompius stayed awake nights figuring out what he thought was a good system. But, alas, he made several mistakes. Within a few hundred years the calendar which he had worked so hard to produce became inaccurate and practically useless.

The man who inherited the resultant confusion of Pompius's errors was a very busy person by the name of Julius Caesar. Caesar called all the best minds of his empire into conference and soon the world was given another calendar. It wasn't much good, either. It only lasted fifteen hundred years or so.

Then Pope Gregory XIII tried to straighten out the mistakes in Caesar's calendar. The result was the Gregorian calendar which we use today.

However, there's trouble ahead. Along about 2500 your many-times great grandchildren will celebrate a New Year that's bound to be troublesome. That's the year our calendars will start getting out of whack.

For instance, when Caesar got stuck with Pompius's system the calendar and the solar equinoxes were months apart. Pope Gregory went to work on Caesar's calendar in 1582 when it was lagging ten days behind the sun.

To Pope Gregory we owe the leap-year. In presenting his calendar to the world, the pope specified that the calendar play leap-frog. As a result, the year 1582 holds all records for losing birthdays. In order to make up the ten days the calendar was behind the sun, the days between October 5 and October 15 were simply skipped—lost forever.

During the evolution of our calendar some strange things have been tried. Once a year was only ten months long, once March was the first month, again January was the first month, and once February was the last.

Scholars still wrestle with the problem of the years. Even today there's agitation for calendar revision. One solution would keep a 12-month year with provision made for the extra day left over from the 52-week year in ordinary years and the two days in leap year.

The extra day in ordinary years would follow December 30 and be known merely as Year Day. January 1 would then follow. In leap years, Saturday, June 30, would be followed the next day by another Saturday called Leap Day, then Sunday, July 1.

However, it doesn't look as though there'll be any revision during 1949. Most people will be too busy with their own problems this year to worry about 2500 when our calendars won't be much good.

Truman is Called Best Dressed Man

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Dec. 27.—President Truman is the best dressed man in America, in fact he has that "ideal look," Mrs. Veronica Dengel said today.

Mrs. Dengel, president of the American Women's Institute, said she polled women's opinions on well dressed men on a national lecture tour. She said President Truman's "garb mirrors Americans. It's neat, smart and striking, and the ideal standard sought by the average businessman."

He shows wise discrimination in choice of style and color."
