Long in appearance but three inches shorter overall, the new Buick Special, now on display by the Laurens Motor Co., features a radically different front end and many engineering improvements. The two-door six-passenger sedan is shown above with new venti-ports, increased use of glass in windshield and rear windows and parking lamps placed in bomb-shaped guards forward of the bumper.

both to farmers and to those who are interested in cooperating with them. "Farmers' Week visitors will have opportunity to see many of these new ideas and practices in the making as they visit the work being done by the South Carolina Experiment Station, in the Ceramics laboratory, and by the other departments of the college, and as they attend the various lectures and demonstrations, to be given by specialists of the Extension Service, Experiment Station, and other college departments, and by invited representatives of commercial agencies.

"Also, if the various groups are to work together, they should know one another better, and we believe Farmers' Week offers an excellent opportunity to make new acquaintances as well as to get new technical information," he added.

Dr. Poole pointed out that all college buildings, classrooms, and laboratories will be open during the week and that members of the college teaching, research, and extension staff will be on hand to show visitors around and for interviews. He stressed the fact that the daily programs have features of interest to all members of the family and that music and recreation will add to the pleasure of the week.

Businessmen Invited To Farmers' Week

Clemson, August 10.—Business and professional people who are interested in agriculture, as well as farm people, are invited to Farmers' Week here, August 22-26, according to a statement issued this week by Dr. R. F. Poole, president, Clemson College. He says the week's program has been planned to present and demonstrate information which should prove interesting and helpful to both groups. "We hope Farmer's Week will bring together men and women from business and industry as well as from the farms," Dr. Poole said. "If the agricultural program of the state is to go forward as it should, it must have the understanding and cooperation of bankers, industrialists, merchants, and other related groups. New ideas and developments are taking place and new practices are being adopted in agriculture. Many of these will be discussed and demonstrated during Farmers' Week, and these discussions and demonstrations should prove interesting and helpful.
