New 'Cow Bomb' Used In Spraying Animals Dry DDT Crystals Now Practical for Spray

A new animal disinfectant device called the "iscomist cow bomb," is now available for use on livestock. The cow bomb is used to apply a deposit of dry DDT crystals for protection against the horn fly, house fly, stable fly, cattle lice, ticks, mosquitoes and certain other insects.

Dry DDT goes into suspension in water less readily than any other form and withstands rain more desirably. It contains no oil to cause burning or to help DDT penetrate the hide. The DDT particles are microscopic in size and thus a given amount covers a greater area than other forms. It is said one iscomist cow bomb will treat approximately 190 cattle with the recommended 30 second treatment. It provides protection for cattle on pasture for about three weeks under average conditions. To help prevent lice infestation, prophylactic treatment of all additions to the herd is recommended. The iscomist cow bomb can be used on dairy and beef cattle, hogs, horses and sheep. The procedure recommended for cows is to cover the body of the animal with paint sprayer motions at from 12 to 18-inch distances; for legs, only 6-8 inches. Total time per cow is about 30 seconds.

Heat Hurts Cows

American dairy farmers have learned that some discontented cows, like some discontented women, can be expensive as well as unpleasant. Most of the cow's troubles can be traced to heat and humidity. A cow, unlike a human being, can perspire only through the mouth. So when the temperature and humidity inside a barn get high, the animal becomes uncomfortable and stubborn—particularly at milking time. The U. S. department of agriculture says an average cow gives off almost a pint of water every hour through breathing. In addition to the high humidity caused by this breathing, a cow has an extremely high body temperature. During the winter months when the cows are in the barn most of the time, this combination results in the generation of an enormous amount of water vapor and heat. When the warm, moisture-laden heat comes into contact with the cold walls, condensation and frost is formed. The net result to the farmers is rotting beams, joist and siding; a loss of hay because of the mold created by moisture and frost; milk contamination, disease, particularly among the young stock; reduction of milk production because of the discomfort to cows, and farmers are forced to work under unpleasant conditions. A simple solution to all these costly problems is an automatic cooling unit which is proving tremendously popular with dairy farmers in general and cows in particular. Superphosphate Held Best For Sugar Beet Fertility Ordinary superphosphate is the best source of phosphate when used as a fertilizer for sugar beets, wheat and barley, according to Dr. Sterling R. Olsen, USDA soil scientist and Robert Gardner, agronomist at the Colorado college experiment station. Experiments on various fertilizers containing radioactive phosphorus, indicate that calcium metaphosphate was a close second.
