EVERYDAY COUNSELOR

By Bishop Herbert Spaugh

There's an old saying that you can catch more flies with sugar than you can with vinegar. Perhaps it is so old-fashioned that it has gotten out of date. It certainly has according to the practice of far too many. Children should be taught early "There are two little golden keys. They are, Thank You, and If You Please."

The demanding child becomes a more demanding teen-ager and if unchecked, the unpopular adult.

It frequently makes me shudder to hear children speak curdly, rudely, and in a demanding way to their parents. And to make matters worse, the parents often do nothing about it.

Parental disrespect needs to be checked early in the pre-school age. If not, it grows progressively worse until in the teens it is almost impossible. I have referred to the fact in this column that I keep on my desk to remind me that the oil of appreciation and thanks goes a long way in improving my relations with other people and even in getting them to do what I want them to do.

Many teen-agers seem to feel that the world owes them a living. It doesn't. However, it does owe them an opportunity. Young people have that opportunity today in this country. They can have what they set their minds to achieve, particularly with the help of God when they seek His wisdom and counsel.

I was interested when driving around the city of Charlotte during the recent heavy snow to see who was out shoveling the snow. I saw few teen-agers doing it, yet it was a wonderful time for boys, particularly, to go out and make some money by contracting to clean walks. Most young fellows want to work at a job where they draw a salary, and not one which depends upon their initiative and industry.

Young people today can get much further with their parents and elders if they carried with them an oil can of appreciation and thanksgiving. We are not a grateful generation, and the one coming along behind us seems to be less so. They are following our example too closely, and even going us one better.

ARTHRITIS?

I have been wonderfully blessed in being able to return to active life after suffering from head to foot with muscular soreness and pain. Most all of joints seemed affected. According to medical diagnosis, I had Rheumatoid Arthritis, Rheumatism and Bursitis. For free information write:
