MOUTH-TO-MOUTH ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION is generally considered the best manual method for reviving anyone who has stopped breathing, regardless of cause. Southern Bell has adopted this method and we have trained many of our employees to use it. I believe everyone should know how to administer mouth-to-mouth artificial respiration, especially now that swimming season is upon us. Why don't you clip the lifesaving steps shown below and make sure every member of your family sees them?

TO KEEP WINDPIPE CLEAR...
WITH LOWER JAW in normal position, tongue may block the windpipe and prevent air from entering lungs (left). Two ways to prevent this are—Center: insert left thumb in mouth, grasp lower jaw and pull forward and upward. Right: push jaw forward by pressing at the jawbone. This method is of special use with infants since the thumb in the mouth can block it.
