College to Dedicate New Auditorium on Monday

Presbyterian College will dedicate its new William Henry Belk Auditorium next Monday morning with a program featuring an address by United States Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., of North Carolina.

The exercises are scheduled to start at 10 a. m. They will be held in the $500,000 building being named in memory of the founder of the great Belk mercantile organization.

The occasion also will honor Mrs. May Henderson Wyatt, of Chickamauga, Ga., for whom the adjoining chapel is named.

Scores of friends and alumni of Presbyterian College are expected to join the faculty and students for the dedication exercises. They will include the family and business associates of the late Mr. Belk, who gave a major gift toward the establishment of this memorial, and Mrs. Wyatt and her four children, who have given the chapel in her honor.

Robert M. Vance, Clinton banker who serves as chairman of the PC board of trustees, will preside. In addition to the main address by Senator Ervin, President Marshall W. Brown will speak in appreciation of the gifts, the Reverend Harry K. Holland, PC trustee and pastor of the Marietta (Ga.) First Presbyterian Church, will lead the litany of dedication and the Presbyterian College robed choir will sing.

The new building is of colonial Georgia design in keeping with the architectural style of the campus. It incorporates three principal facilities: the main auditorium, air-conditioned with a seating capacity of approximately 1,100; the chapel for small worship groups of 100 persons; and a three-story fine arts division to the rear.

Aromatic tobacco can be grown successfully on farms in the Piedmont region of South Carolina. John Henry Franklin, of the Hickory Tavern community, third from left, has already grossed $1,300 from one acre—and here is showing that he has more in the barn. Left to right are G. B. Butler, Clemson Extension Service special assistant for aromatic tobacco, Greenville; J. A. Few, manager, Southeastern Aromatic Tobacco Company, Anderson; Franklin; and Charlie Bronson, Jr., Negro agricultural agent for Laurens County. (Clemson College Extension Service Photo).

County Man Gets $1500 From One Acre of Tobacco

A hefty little acre of aromatic tobacco in Laurens County will produce $1,500 worth of scented leaf this year.

John Henry Franklin, one mile southeast of Hickory Tavern, could conceivably become a rich man with a few more well-managed acres of the same. He has already sold $1,300 worth—and has tobacco valued at $200 still in the barn.

The high value of this chop would not surprise Coastal Plains tobacco farmers who raise the flue-cured varieties—but here in the Piedmont it's considered a lot of money from one acre. Flue-cured tobacco has a high per-acre value too, but many farmers are kept out of the lofty income brackets by the simple mechanism of rigid acreage controls.

Not so with aromatic. There are no acreage controls. In fact, state and federal agricultural agencies in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia in recent years have tried to encourage its production. Here's the reason.

The cigarette industry in the United States needs a whopping 100,000,000 pounds of aromatic each year to blend with other kinds. Aromatic gives the pleasing tobacco aroma to the cigarette.

About 99 per cent of our present supply of aromatic is imported—coming principally from the countries of Turkey, Greece, Bulgaria, and Russia. The most that has been produced in this country in any one year is 365,000 pounds—less than one per cent of the annual requirement.

Studies at Duke University, Clemson College, and other colleges have shown that aromatic, or Turkish tobacco, is well suited to the climate and Piedmont soils in the four southeastern states.

Turkish tobacco culture is well suited to big farms and also the small acreage or even parttime farm. The equipment needed for tobacco growing and curing is relatively simple and inexpensive. Clemson is now perfecting plans for labor-saving plastic-type barn and many other innovations to make production and curing easier and less costly.

M. L. Outz, Laurens County Agent, is trying to interest more farmers in aromatic. It could bring a higher income on farms where income is at present too low.

J. A. Few, manager of the Southeastern Aromatic Tobacco Co., Anderson, says that aromatic is now grown in about 15 Piedmont counties—but that he'd like to see more farmers take to the crop.

"Aromatic is not as expensive to produce as cotton, but requires considerably more work. However, we pay well for good quality—which all growers can get by careful attention to growing, picking, and curing."

is one that will pay you back well for the time and effort spent in producing it," Outz said.

Few assures growers of a market in the county by a simple marketing contract. New growers are signed up by the county agent who also gives advice on production and marketing problems throughout the year.

"We now have 19 aromatic growers. I believe this is a crop that would fit well in the program on many other farms in this area. It

Ten Reasons Why We Should ELECT NIXON PRESIDENT

1. HE IS EXPERIENCED. As Vice President he has had the best training in history, sharing the decisions of the Eisenhower-Nixon administration, standing in for the President on countless occasions, and presiding over the Cabinet and the National Security Council frequently.
2. HE IS ACQUAINTED with world leaders who respect him. He is able to speak for America, and has spoken for America, courageously and steadfastly.
3. HE COMPREHENDS the world struggle for power and the widespread yearning for peace. His missions to foreign countries have given him a unique opportunity to study the problems of foreign relations and to form his own opinions first hand as to how these problems can be dealt with in the future.
4. HE IS A FRIEND of the working man. Nixon supports state right-to-work laws which protect workers from forced membership in unions as a condition for employment.
5. HE IS SYMPATHETIC with the problems of the average American, coming from a modest family himself and having worked his way through school.
6. HE BELIEVES education is a local problem. He pledges continuation of the primary responsibility for education at the local community and state level, and opposes active Federal participation in educational policies.
7. HE UNDERSTANDS the problems of every department of the executive branch of the Federal government through his service in the cabinet. At the same time he has been the presiding officer of the Senate and has seen the identical problems through the eyes of the legislative branch.
8. HE KNOWS THE IMPORTANCE of sound fiscal policies. He backs those measures which have given this nation eight years of unprecedented prosperity with more people working at more jobs with the highest take home pay in history.
9. HE KNOWS WHAT INFLATION can do to the fixed income of retired citizens. He was an active participant in the policies which have held inflation at a standstill for eight years. The national debt, created by unbalanced budgets has increased less in the past eight years, than it did in an average single year during 20 years of Democratic administration.
10. HE UNDERSTANDS the problems of the Southern Textile Industry. Leaders of this industry, which is vital to the economy of South Carolina, have talked with both candidates and agree that Nixon understands our problems and will do more for us than the other candidate.
