Southern Bell Will Survey Customers

Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company here is going to its customers to find out if it is providing the service it should.

According to A. R. Fernell, Southern Bell's manager in Clinton, the company is going to ask its customers how it is doing.

Fernell said the plan, called Service Attitude Measurement (SAM), will work this way:

When a customer has contact with the telephone people, asking for a new phone, trouble call, problems with billing and that sort of thing, he may be mailed a questionnaire asking him how he was treated.

In addition, the company will select at random several of its telephone users to get their opinion on their phone service.
